'No Plebiscite!' Defiant Czechs Tell Allies

O'Connor Must Have Luck to Win, Study Shows

Claims for New Deal Foe Called Too High as Purge Drive Nears Its Climax in New York District

This is the first of two articles on the campaign in which Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, seeks Democratic renomination over Presidential opposition. The second will appear tomorrow.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York City, Sept. 16.—Under the black lace shadows of the Third Avenue Elevated the red torches suddenly sputter into fizzing light and a loudspeaker screams raucously:

"Oh, give my regards to the Gashouse,

"That's where I long to be....."

Here, in New York's famous old "Gashouse" district, the last of President Roosevelt's so-called "purges" will be fought out next Tuesday afternoon, primary day.

Leading by a slighter margin than his aides suppose is Representative O'Connor, the swaggering, heavy-set chairman of the House Rules Committee, and the man President Roosevelt would like to see defeated.

3 Candidates in Race

But the pattern of the political battle is as complicated and colorful as its battleground, for the Gashouse district embraces not only the poorest tenement-filled slums of the metropolis but also the wealthiest residential area in the world—exclusive Sutton Place and glittering Park Avenue.

The candidates, squeezed by political exigencies into strange new alignments, are:

John J. O'Connor, incumbent, lifelong Democrat, 52 years old, Irish Catholic, candidate in both Democratic and Republican primaries.

James H. Fay, crippled World War veteran (leg shot off in Argonne), 39 years old, Irish Catholic, 10 years as deputy commissioner of city hospitals, 3 years chief field deputy of the Internal Revenue Bureau's third district, Democratic candidate and unopposed nominee of the American Labor Party.

Allen Welsh Dulles, 45 years old, 10 years a career man in the State department, corporation and international law expert, grandson of one Secretary of State and nephew of another.

Administration Active

The President named O'Connor last among those Congressmen whose defeat would help along the New Deal. Since then he has taken no direct part in the primary and plans no further action. But the Administration, through the dynamic Thomas Corcoran, the RFC attorney who does so much of the President's intellectual leg-work, is actively interested in the result.

This interest does not merely spring from O'Connor's lusty, full-throated antagonism to much of the New Deal or from his successful activity as the spearhead of the House revolt that killed the Government reorganization bill.

But to New Dealers the ouster of O'Connor would mean one great legislative blessing in the hectic course of Administration bills through the House: the replacement of O'Connor at the head of the sometimes cantankerous Rules Committee by Representative Sabath, of Illinois, often described

Director Finds 3-Letter Word Meaning New Birds for Zoo

Mann Home From Europe With Emus of Puzzle Fame and a Giant Manucode

One of four emu brought from Europe for the birdhouse at the National Zoo by Dr. M. Mann.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, arrived yesterday from a ten-week European tour, bringing with him four specimens of emu, that delight of the crossword puzzle fan, and three smaller birds never exhibited here before.

The emus, ostrich-like birds from Australia, are youngsters, and expected to make life more cheerful for the 35-year-old veteran kept in an enclosure near the bird house. He lost his mate last year.

The other birds are a giant manucode, styled by the Malays the "bird of the gods," a green and violet palm roller, a pigeon-like bird of Central Asia, and a very rare amethyst starling fron Central Africa.

The prize exhibit is the giant manucode. Dr. Mann said that, so far as he knew, this is the first specimen of this extremely rare bird ever to be brought to America.

Dr. and Mrs. Mann visited 19 zoos in nine countries on their European tour. Dr. Mann observed that "all the zoos in Europe are booming."

The emus, Dr. Mann said, were hatched in May at the Whipsnade Zoo, near London. There are two males and two females about knee-high. The three smaller birds were obtained from Jean Delacour, bird fancier, of Cleres, France.

The Manns visited zoos in Sweden, Russia, Denmark, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Scotland and Ireland.

Mrs. Mann said she accompanied her husband to all the zoos.

"Even in Paris?" she was asked.

"Yes," she replied. "It was 50-50. I went with him to look at animals and he went with me to look at hats."

C. I. O. Forces Arbitration In U. A. W. Fight

Representatives of Lewis to Mediate Reinstatement of Expelled Officers

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 16.—A compromise peace pact ended today the dispute over expulsion of four United Automobile Workers' officers between Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Martin lost his fight against C. I. O. arbitration in a U. A. W. factional fight. By formal agreement the status of the expelled officers was submitted to Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, C. I. O. vice chairmen, for a final decision, expected October 1.

The C. I. O. failed to gain approval of Chairman John L. Lewis' proposal for immediate reinstatement of the officers.

Where Lewis had proposed mediation by C. I. O. leaders of other U. A. W. disputes, the agreement set up a joint committee of Murray, Hillman, Martin and R. J. Thomas, U. A. W. vice president, to act in this capacity.

The factional split that for a time threatened dual unionism in the automobile industry resulted in expulsion of George F. Addes, international secretary-treasurer, and Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen, Ed Hall and Wyndham Mortimer, whom Martin charged with engaging in a Communist conspiracy to seize control of the U. A. W. They in turn charged Martin was dominated by a former Communist leader.

A joint statement by Martin, the U. A. W. board, Hillman and Murray today attributed factional differences to "outside influences" and added the agreement was "aimed at driving from this union for all time those influences, whatever may be their name."

Strike Ties Up 50-85% of Trucks in N.Y.

Movement of Foodstuffs Declared Unaffected by Spontaneous Move of 3 A. F. L. Locals

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Between 50 and 85 per cent of New York's trucking industry was paralyzed tonight by a spontaneous, unvoted strike by three locals of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs (A. F. of L.), but movement of foodstuffs was not vitally affected.

The strike began yesterday and estimates tonight placed the number of strikers as high as 8,000.

Priest Forgives, Rehires Gardener Who Robbed Him

Robbed by the man he had befriended, the Rev. L. J. Fealy, pastor of Holy Redeemer Church, Berwyn, Md., yesterday turned the other cheek, forgave the offender, and befriended him again.

Virgil R. Grimes, 27, colored, who works as gardener for Father Fealy, appeared at police headquarters here yesterday and told Detective Sergt. E. E. Thompson that five men had kidnaped him two days ago, forced him to point out where father Fealy kept any valuables, and stole $30.

Under questioning, however, police found that the story didn't hold water. They got in touch with the priest, who arrived and obtained from the weeping gardener a confession of guilt. Father Fealy forgave the man, who was placed in his custody, and will allow him to pay back the money in work.

Police Can't Define Drunkenness, but Know Symptoms

Atlantic City, N. J. Sept. 16 (AP).—Wanted: An air-tight definition of drunkenness.

The International Association of Police and Fire Surgeons discussed the matter today and came to the conclusion that no matter how drunk a driver may be, a smart lawyer often can find flaws in the doctor's test.

Dr. Robert A. Kilduffe, laboratory director of the Atlantic City Hospital, said he hadn't had much luck trying to prove drunken drivers drunk, but that he'd figured out the six stages of drunkenness:

1. Dry and decent.
2. Delighted and devilish.
3. Delinquent and disgusting.
4. Dizzy and delirious.
5. Dazed and dejected.
6. Dead drunk.

6 Drown as Car Plunges in River

Manitowoc, Wis., Sept. 16 (AP).—Six persons were drowned tonight when their family car plunged over the railing on the Twenty-first street viaduct into the Manitowoc River. Their bodies were recovered half an hour later.

The dead were Louis Vande Castle, 45; three Vande Castle children; Martin Witzak, and Mrs. Martin Witzak, also a daughter of Louis Vande Castle.

Pair Steals $100,000 Stamps To Build Luxurious Home

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—A white handkerchief waved in the window and ammonia-soaked crosses that turned red on "planted" $10 bills exposed a fantastic Jekyll-Hyde plot today involving the theft of $100,000 worth of rare stamps from Capt. W. G. Nowell-Usticke, millionaire New York stamp dealer.

Acting Police Capt. Samuel Mooney said the alleged thieves, Francis and Anne Greulich—married, quiet, unobtrusive, just two among New York's toiling millions—confessed in the line-up at police headquarters.

And this is the story told by arresting officers:

Greulich, 35, worked for a while as a $30-a-week clerk in Capt. Nowell-Usticke's office, sorting stamps.

His statuesque wife got him the job in 1934, when they were married after meeting at a dance. She was Capt. Nowell-Usticke's assistant at $35 a week.

Greulich began a collection of his own. He decided to go into business for himself—and in the next two years he had opened three offices under various names, building up a flourishing business.

Each day he would describe to his wife the stamps sought by his cus-

U. S. to Send Spain Flour For Refugees

Donation of 60,000 Barrels 'Strictly Impartial,' Hull Says, Citing 'Growing Problem in Misery'

A "growing problem in human misery" which threatens "widespread starvation and loss of life among women and children" in Spain yesterday brought from the State Department word that this Government is sending 60,000 barrels of flour to those made indigent by the civil war.

Declaring there was a vast army of refugees, estimated at nearly 3,000,000 persons, a department statement said:

"The problem is beyond the resources of organizations created in America and abroad to raise funds for relief in Spain, despite the admirable work they have performed and are continuing.

"Faced by such a situation the American people cannot remain indifferent."

The flour will be milled, at the expense of the Red Cross, from wheat donated by the Surplus Commodities Corporation. The Red Cross has arranged for distribution of the flour through the American Friends Service Committee, starting in October.

The department emphasized that the distribution would be "impartial" and "according to need," after pointing out that the refugees, driven from their homes had "sought refuge on one side or the other of the battle line."

That much more than the flour will be needed to prevent acute distress among vast numbers of the war victims was indicated in the assertion that "there is insufficient housing, clothing and food for these refugees."

The Commodities Corporation is contributing 250,000 bushels of wheat for the undertaking. Corporation officials said a similar arrangement may be made for shipment of flour to China.

Secretary of State Hull conferred with Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, yesterday before making the announcement.

Stern Measures Taken Despite Pressure; Henlein's Supporters Reported Deserting to Conservative Groups

By Walter Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 16.—Rudolf Bechyne, vice premier of Czechoslovakia, warned publicly tonight this country would go to war before it would allow a plebiscite in the Sudeten German areas.

"That would be the shortest way to war," he said, at a time when Czech newspapers were reporting that France and Great Britain favored a plebiscite under international control. "There could not be found in Czechoslovakia a government which would accept a plebiscite. If by any chance such a government could be found, it would be smashed within an hour by the indignation of the whole nation, which would rather accept death than the crippling of the homeland."

"Vote Would Not Settle"

"Besides, a plebiscite would not settle anything in that dispute. At least a million Germans would emigrate from the plebiscite regions inland and make a new German minority here, which would give rise to a new Sudeten German question and put new pressure on Czechoslovakia until the state were destroyed.

"In this country there will be no plebiscite, and no international police. We restored order ourselves and we know how to keep it, while we go ahead and put through our program of complete equality of all nationalities in the republic. I beg the country to have full confidence in the government and in the army."

Sudeten Party Dissolved

This announcement was made on a day when the government was dissolving the Sudeten-German Party by closing its various headquarters throughout the Sudeten land. The government also ordered the dissolution of the "F. S.," the Sudeten-German storm troops.

These two measures were taken quietly by the German population, which has now completely given in to the iron rule of martial law. No incidents or clashes occurred during the day. Tanks still patrolled some of the villages west, machine guns were still set up on street corners, but the people went about their business quietly.

There was evidence tonight Konrad Henlein is losing his grip on a large part of the Sudeten population. Wenzel Jaksch, leader of the German Social Democratic Party, which has control of about 500,000 anti-Nazis, returned to Prague this afternoon and reported his organizers had received thousands of applications for membership since Henlein's proclamation of yesterday, in which he called for union with the third Reich.

Jaksch said that already leaders of the old German Agrarian, Catholic and other parties which some months ago affiliated with the Nazi

Chamberlain Sees King George; Roosevelt Confers With Cabinet

President Discusses Crisis for Two Hours; 'Still Teetering,' Is World View; Hull and Morgenthau See Him Early

By Robert C. Albright.
Post Staff Writer.

In a momentous meeting, President Roosevelt discussed with his Cabinet for two hours yesterday the possible effects of war in Europe on American neutrality, international finance and trade agreements.

The physical aspects of embroilment of this country in any such war—Army and Navy preparations or mobilization plans—were at no time touched upon, it was understood.

Attention was concentrated wholly on the obvious points at which a great war abroad would touch United States interests, here and in other lands.

One Cabinet officer said, on leaving the conference:

"Some of the strain has been relieved, but it is still teetering."

Still on the Brink of War

It was indicated he meant that Europe was on the edge of conflict despite the unprecedented flight of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to Berchtesgaden to hear Reichschancellor Hitler's views first hand.

With reports current that Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to London, is in constant telephonic communication with Secretary of State Hull, observers watched closely for any indications from Hull of the conversations' portents.

But Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who were early White House consultants of the President yesterday for 45 minutes, evaded newsmen by leaving through a side door. Secretary Morgenthau has often done this previously, thus reaching the Treasury by a short cut, but it was most unusual for the grave-faced State Department chief to avoid newspapermen obviously.

The Administration policy, however, was to withhold comment from all sources to the barest minimum. President Roosevelt called off his own semi-weekly press conference on grounds he was not prepared to comment on the situation, an action received with the utmost seriousness, as he has done this less than a half-dozen times in more than five years.

Talk was heard throughout Washington of the possibility that a special session of Congress might be called in event of war abroad.

Several factors pointed toward the necessity of

Hitler Demands Annexation and a Protectorate Over Czechs, Prime Minister Said to Have Revealed

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 16.—The European crisis continued grave tonight, as Prime Minister Chamberlain flew back to London and talked for hours, first to his inner cabinet, and then to King George, about Hitler's determination to annex part of Czechoslovakia peaceably or otherwise.

A full meeting of the cabinet has been summoned for tomorrow morning. The cabinet must decide whether to put tremendous pressure upon the Prague republic to surrender its Sudeten German areas to Germany, or whether to call the Fuehrer's bluff and dare him to do his worst. Upon that decision may hang the lives of millions of Europeans—and eventually perhaps some American lives.

Early next week Chamberlain plans to return to Germany to report to Hitler whether Britain will string with Germany, or march against the Nazis. This conference will be held, not at Berchtesgaden, but in the remilitarized Rhineland, probably at Godesberg, a spa on the left bank of the Rhine.

Official circles cautioned against extreme optimism or pessimism. Chamberlain refused to commit himself to any line of action without the full approval of his cabinet, plus assurances he would not risk the downfall of his government when Parliament comes to life again.

Precautions are being taken against a leakage of the official Hitler-Chamberlain deal, if deal there is to be, for the partition of Czechoslovakia. It was premature leakage of the terms of the Hoare-Laval deal for the dismemberment of Abyssinia which nearly brought about the defeat of the government of Stanley Baldwin, in which Chamberlain was No. 2 man.

Immediately upon his return to 10 Downing street this evening, Chamberlain went into a huddle with his inner cabinet of advisers: Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary; Sir Samuel Hoare, the home secretary, and Sir John Simon, the chancellor of the exchequer. This meeting lasted 2½ hours. Others present part of the time were Sir Alexander Cadogan and Sir Robert Vansittart of the foreign office; Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary, and Lord Runciman, the British media-

Dr. Koo Assails League Failure to Aid China, Asks Sanctions, Armed Action Against Japan

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 16.—Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations, bitterly attacked today the League's failure to intervene actively in the Chinese-Japanese war and proposed a three-point course for the organization to take against Japan.

Stating China "desires that the League face the facts in the Far East," the Chinese asked that the League:

Apply Article 17 of the Covenant, paving the way for mediation in disputes between League members and nonmembers and a stepping stone to application of military and economic punitive measures.

Apply the resolutions of the previous League Council and Assembly sessions by enforcing an embargo on arms, munitions, airplanes, oil, raw materials and cash against Japan and by giving financial and other material aid to China.

Create new measures to deter Japan from the alleged use of poison gas and halt the bombing of undefended towns and civilian populations.

In his plea, made before the League Assembly, Dr. Wellington Koo said not less than 1,000,000 Chinese had been killed since outbreak of the Far Eastern war July 7, 1937. He also presented these statistics:

Thirty million Chinese wounded or made homeless.

Since January 1, 1938, 2,204 Japanese air raids on China's civilian population.

Estimated first-line Japanese fighting planes in China, 500.

All units of Japanese second and third fleets have been operating in Chinese waters.

One million Japanese soldiers now on Chinese soil.

During the last year 450 Chinese junks sunk by Japanese warships, killing 8,400 Chinese.

"The League," he said, "except for the dispatch of three anti-epidemic units to China, has done nothing beyond passing a few platonic resolutions."

Roosevelt Set To Prevent Rail Strike

Prepared to Use Power to Halt Tie-ups by Proclaiming State of National Emergency

By Robert C. Albright.

The President last night was prepared to invoke last-resort machinery of the National mediation act to avoid a transportation tie-up if 19 railroad labor unions now balloting on proposed wage reductions vote to strike on October 1.

Mr. Roosevelt was in conference with Chairman William M. Leiserson, of the National Railway Mediation Board, who reported failure of recent efforts for voluntary arbitration and discussed other alternatives under the act.

May Proclaim Emergency

Unless the President steps in and attempts personally to settle the dispute in conference with railway and labor executives, he may exercise his power in event of a strike call to proclaim a national emergency.

Such a proclamation automatically would maintain the status quo between employers and employes for 60 days, postponing alike the 15 per cent pay cut and strike threat while a fact-finding board investigates and reports on both sides of the controversy.

Following his conference with the President, Leiserson expressed hope that the wage controversy can be settled without a strike.

"We still have plenty of time," he said, pointing out that full operation of mediation machinery of itself could forestall both walkout and pay cut until December 1.

Leiserson said that with one lone exception, every mediated rail controversy in the 12 years of the act's operation had been settled between the parties at odds. The exception was the Louisiana and Arkansas Railway labor controversy, finally settled after seven weeks strike. Emergency boards have been named eight or nine times in the 12 years, but never on an issue involving all rail unions.

"It was learned meanwhile that George M. Harrison, chairman of the committee of railway labor executives, has sought a conference with the President. Harrison, and some other labor executives, were to have seen the President Wednesday, but the appointment was called off due to Mr. Roosevelt's trip to his son's bedside.

When a new appointment is arranged, the labor group not only is expected to discuss the wage dispute with the President, but other rail issues as wall, including a protest against a proposed $14,000,000 R. F. C. loan involved in a New Orleans consolidation of terminal facilities affecting employes.

Spokesmen for the carriers here said they knew of no efforts by railway officials to arrange a White House conference.

While the President himself could invite both sides in to talk with him in a personal attempt to work out agreement, some doubt was expressed that he would depart from the mediation machinery rovided in the law.

At Mr. Roosevelt's request, the National Railway Mediation Board chairman outlined to the President the full status of negotiations between the carriers and their employes and possible steps remaining under the law. He did not discuss the President's own views.

The first step of voluntary arbitration was passed when the board, after stepping in September 1 to mediate the wage dispute, was unable to get both sides to agree to arbitration in Chicago. The railroads were willing, but the unions were not.

First Deadline Oct. 1

The 30 days provided in the act, during which the cut may not be imposed nor the employes strike, will expire October 1. With collapse of first arbitration efforts, the railroads have notified the men they propose to put the 15 per cent cut in effect October 1. Meanwhile the unions have been conducting a strike vote on the issue, and the ballots will be tabulated September 26. If the vote is to strike, carriers will be notified imposition of the cut means union employes will withdraw from their service on October 1.

"The law provides that if we see anything like that is going to happen, it creates an emergency and we can so report to the President," Leiserson explained yesterday. Then, in his judgment, he can issue a proclamation that an emergency exists."

If an emergency is proclaimed, President Roosevelt can appoint an emergency fact-finding board to hear both sides of the controversy, and the status quo between carriers and employes would continue another 60 days from the date of the proclamation.

The emergency board within 30 days would make a report on the merits of the case, with recommendations, which would be made public. In all previous cases, with the one exception, the two parties have come together and settled on a basis of these findings.

Asked what in his opinion would happer, Leiserson smiled and declined to predict. "It's like the Czechoslovakian situation," he said.

Inquiry Calls Man Margiotti Said Was Paid for Laws

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 16 (AP).—A Democratic legislator, named as having said he "received" $5,000 in the "sale" of legislation, was called before a special committee of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives today to face former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti said Representative Charles Melchiorre (Democrat), of Philadelphia, told him he received the money as part of $150,000 "paid" for the passage of beer and movie legislation in 1935.

McAdoo Would Lose 40 Times Rather Than Win by 'Nonsense'

By the Associated Press.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, defeated for renomination by Sheridan Downey, said yesterday he would "rather lose 40 times than stand for such nonsense" as the $30-every-Thursday pension system advocated by Downey.

SEN. McADOO

The Senator, who came to Washington on what he described as personal and State matters, asserted the pension plan, "if forced upon the people of California, would bankrupt the State and its municipalities." He branded it a "magical mirage" with a "ham-and-egg appeal."

McAdoo declined to discuss his immediate plans, but said he was "not looking for a Government appointment" and would not accept any diplomatic post or appointment to "any Government commission."

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 16 (AP).—A suit charging violation of the corrupt practices act in the successful renomination campaign of Senate Majority Leader Barkley and seeking to bar his name from the November election ballot, was filed in circuit court here today.

The petition, filed by two Newport (Ky.) attorneys, charged that Barkley and others, by "threats of the loss of their employment, coerced" Federal employes in Kentucky to "contribute money" for the Barkley campaign and to vote for Barkley.

In Washington, Senator Barkley said he had instructed attorneys to enter his appearance.

Barkley defeated Gov. A. B. Chandler in the August 6 primary. Chandler said today the suit was a "complete surprise" to him.

San Francisco, Sept. 16 (AP).—Official returns from all but one small county today gave Philip Bancroft, Walnut Creek farmer, a lead of 2,493 votes over Ray L. Riley, his opponent for the Republican Senatorial nomination in the August 30 primary.

Bancroft received 295,616 votes to 293,123 for Riley. Only the official returns from sparsely settled Alpine County were lacking. It has a registration of 124 Republicans, 92 of whom were included in the unofficial count.

In the November election, the Republican nominee will oppose Sheridan Downey, Democrat and advocate of the "$30 every Thursday" pension plan.

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—Senator Tydings, victor for renomination over New Deal-supported Representative Lewis, received a letter from Senator Glass, of Virginia, stating that "nearly every real Democrat in the country" is "rejoicing" over his victory.

"I remained up until long after midnight Monday to hear the result and when it became apparent that you would win, I slept peacefully for the first time in many days," Glass wrote.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 16 (AP).—If this years crop of old-age pension enthusiasts gets strong enough, the United States will see a "new high" in governmental paternalism, Earl Godwin, president of the White House Correspondents Association, predicted today before the National Petroleum Association.

"One good way to defeat or scare a liberal into fits," said Godwin, "is to be more liberal, and todays liberal in politics seems to be someone liberal with the taxpayers' money.

"I think Huey Long, promising every man a kingship, seared this Administration into enacting the social security law, and if these old-age pensioners with their funny schemes about money get strong enough, we may see something that will mark a new high in governmental paternalism."

Tobacco Growers File Suit to Halt U. S. Crop Control

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 16. (U.P.).—A group of North Carolina tobacco growers late today challenged constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and asked for an order restraining collection for penalty taxes on tobacco marketed in excess of individual quotas under the crop control law.

Similar suits have been filed in Georgia and South Carolina.

The suit, backed by the Anti-Crop Control Association, was brought by H. I. Ogburn, of Sanford, and approximately 600 other tobacco growers, against J. C. Vann, operator of the Vann Tobacco Warehouse at Wendell, N. C., and approximately 340 other warehousemen.

Superior Court Judge W. C. Harris issued an order against the warehousemen, ordering them to show cause Sept. 27 why he should not grant an injunction against enforcement of the act.

Roosevelt Gives Collier Trophy To Army Air Corps

The Collier Trophy was presented to the Army Air Corps yesterday by President Roosevelt in recognition of the "greatest achievement in aviation" in 1937.

Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, assistant chief of the Air Corps, received the award for the Air Corps, which won the award for the fourth time by designing, constructing and equipping the first sub-stratosphere, pressure cabin plane ever to be flown successfully.

Mr. Roosevelt was unable to hand over the actual trophy, donated by Robert L. Collier, founder of Collier's Magazine, because it was in Hyde Park, N. Y., where the presentation originally was scheduled to be made.

Principally responsible for the development of the plane were Maj. Carl F. Greene, Capt. Albert M. Johnson, stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and Dr. John E. Younger, formerly aeronautical mechanical engineer at Wright Field, who is now a professor at the University of Maryland. Lieut. Col. Oliver P. Echols, of Wright Field, was administrative director of the research on the plane.

William L. Chenery, Collier's editor, represented the magazine.

U.F.W.A. Union Calls for 'Liberal' To Succeed Myers

Appointment of "a vigorous, outstanding liberal with a good understanding of labor policy" as successor to Governor W. I. Myers, resigned head of the Farm Credit Administration, was urged yesterday by the United Federal Workers of America.

Jacob Baker, president of the union, wrote the suggestion to President Roosevelt.

The sort of official he had in mind, Baker said last night, was someone of the type of Representative David Lewis, of Maryland, who lost the senatorial nomination to Senator Tydings, or Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, who also was defeated.

"By this," he explained, "I mean simply that the problem is a serious one, and we want a real liberal. Those two names are merely used as examples of the kind of governor we would like to see appointed."

Democrats Move to Close 'Purge' Ranks

Farley Pledges Aid and Barkley, Tydings, George Echo Plea for Peace

An effort to close up Democratic ranks after the bitter primary battles in which the White House took a direct part was in the making yesterday against the handicap of deep-seated division between party conservatives and New Dealers.

Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, predicted that primary strife would not hurt Democratic nominees in the November election.

Senator George, of Georgia, who won renomination Wednesday over direct opposition of the President, urged that differences be laid aside and hatreds banned.

Barkley Congratulates Tydings

Senator Barkley, majority leader, arrived at the Capital and personally congratulated Senator Tydings, another blacklisted Senator opposed by the President, who won his renomination in Maryland. Senator Barkley is a New Dealer, and there has been talk of a conservative move to replace him as Senate leader. Barkley's friends are sure it will muster few votes if it ever materializes.

Leaving the White House Cabinet meeting, Farley, who has never sympathized with the attempt to punish Democratic dissenters, was cheerful. Asked about the foreign situation, he said, "I don't know anything about it. I don't know enough about the domestic situation."

"What about the primaries?" he was asked.

"Well, they are about all over now," he said.

"Did you say 'Thank God?'" asked a reporter.

"All right, make it thank God," said the genial chairman.

Farley Weighs Dewey

As to the effect of the primary conflicts upon the general election, he said, "they will have no effect as far as the election of the Democratic nominees is concerned. I'm sincere about that."

Farley added that he had sent congratulations to every Democratic winner in the primaries, and "I've sympathized with the losers."

Farley wondered whether availability of District Attorney Thomas Dewey for the Republican nomination for Governor in New York had been lessened by the declaring of a mistrial in the Hines case. If there was any blame for the mistrial resting upon the prosecution, at least it could be said that Dewey did it himself; he couldn't blame it on subordinates, Farley declared.

George, Tydings Pacific

An apparent move to heal wounds inflicted by the primaries came from Senator George, who said in Atlanta:

"Good Democrats will lay aside all differences and work for the common good. This is no time for bias, malice or hatred."

Here, Senator Tydings told the Associated Press that "all these little fights we've had will be forgotten in event of a European war."

The Maryland Senator said Congress would have its hands full "in charting the course properly" to avoid being drawn into war.

Discussing other probable issues in the next congress, Tydings expressed the opinion that a bill to reorganize the executive branch of the Government would be offered and would pass but with restrictions giving Congress a check on the procedure.

Youth Takes Connecticut G. O. P. Helm

Convention Rids Party of Censured Leaders; Danaher Named to Run Against Lonergan

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 16.—Connecticut Republicans drew heavily today from their ranks of "youngsters" in selecting candidates for the November elections and then, in an uproarious wind-up to their State convention, removed from the party's State committee the last of a trio of veteran leaders censured by two grand juries.

The delegates, divided by only one contest, named a ticket headed by John A. Danaher for Senator and Raymond E. Baldwin for Governor. Danaher will oppose Senator Lonergan, renominated earlier in the week by the Democrats.

Baldwin led the fight which removed from party leadership Clarence G. Willard, of New Haven, long an intimate of the late "Boss" J. Henry Roraback. Willard was censured by a grand jury which investigated Merritt Parkway land sales.

The slate, which included President James L. McConaughy of Wesleyan University as nominee for lieutenant governor, and Mrs. Helen Lewis, of Stratford, for secretary of State, the first woman to run as a Republican candidate for State office, was the youngest nominated by the party in the memory of veteran leaders.

The average age of the candidates was 44 and the oldest was only 52.

Besides Willard, party leaders removed from the State central committee were Maj. John Buckley, of Windsor, criticized by a grand jury investigating Waterbury municipal affairs and legislative lobbying, and Charles E. Williamson, Fairfield County chieftain, among 27 accused of conspiracy in the Waterbury investigation.

Sherlock Davis Promoted by SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday that Sherlock Davis, assistant director of the Trading and Exchange Division, has been promoted to the post of technical adviser to the commission on problems relating to the over-the-counter markets.

The change was made in the light of the increased problems of regulation confronting the commission under the provisions of the Ma-

Hearst Paper's Warehouse Burns

New York, Sept. 16. (U.P.).—An old five-story brick warehouse used by the New York Journal and American, Hearst-owned newspaper, to store newsprint and old papers caught fire tonight and made a spectacular blaze near the waterfront on the lower east side.

The modern office building of the Journal and American is separated from the burning structure by an areaway. Editorial workers in the office building moved into the composing room with their typewriters to continue work when smoke entering the editorial room made it impossible for them to continue there.

Damage was estimated unofficially at about $75,000. Fifteen hundred tons of newsprint were a total loss.

Post Staff Photos.

Paris Opinion, Like Leaders, Split on War

Cabinet Divided; Army Sanguine of Victory but Is Worried Over Lack of Support

By John Elliott,
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Sept. 16.—Not only the French government but also French public opinion is divided as to whether France should fight for Czechoslovakia as the hour of the fateful decision approaches.

This decision may have to be taken before Sunday or Monday, when Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet are expected to go to London to talk over with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain the Nazi proposals for a settlement of the Sudeten German problem that the British prime minister brought back from Berchtesgaden.

No official communication yet has been received by the Quai d'Orsay from London concerning the nature of these proposals; neither have the expected invitations to the French ministers to confer in the British capital yet been received. An airplane to take Daladier and Bonnet to London, however, already is waiting at Le Bourget Airport.

The French cabinet is divided as to the position that this country should take in the crisis. Foreign Minister Bonnet, supported by Ex-Premier Camille Chautemps, is said to be favorable to accepting a plebiscite and the neutralization proposal in order to avert a war.

On the other hand, Minister of Justice Paul Reynaud and Georges Mandel, the minister of colonies, are for a grim stand by France on the Czech question, arguing the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia means the ruin of France's system of alliances and French influence in Central and Eastern Europe. They are supported by the permanent officials of the French foreign office. Daladier is said to be wavering between these two positions and inclining toward the Bonnet school.

The presidents of the two houses of Parliament — Jules Jeanneney, president of the Senate, and Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, demand that France should stand by her allies.

The French general staff, headed by Gen. Maurice Gamelin, is reported to have informed the government that the French army would obtain a military decision in the event of a conflict with the Reich, but they are doubtful of the advisability of the country engaging in a war in view of the divided state of the nation.

Today Daladier and Bonnet took lunch at the American Embassy as the guests of Ambassador William C. Bullitt, to meet Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles who is returning to the United States tomorrow. The lunch was also attended by Chautemps and Edwin C. Wilson, counselor of the embassy.

Rajah Offer England All

Bikaner, Rajputana, India, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Maharajah of Bikaner, ruler of nearly 10,000,000 persons, today offered all his resources to George VI in event Great Britain should become involved in war. The maharajah's state is the seventh largest in India.

He made a similar offer in 1914. He sent troops to Egypt and Palestine and saw active service himself in France and Egypt.

N. Y. Councilman Is a Communist, House Group Told

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—City Councilman Michael J. Quill, international president of the C. I. O.'s Transport Workers Union, was described as a Communist today by John J. Murphy, a witness before a sub-committee of the Dies congressional investigating committee.

Murphy, a transport worker, testified he himself joined the Communist Party in 1934 and attended unit meetings of the party with Quill. Quill was attending the State C. I. O. convention when told of Murphy's testimony.

"It's a bunch of damn lies," was all he would say.

Quill is vice chairman of the American Labor Party, and was supported by it for his post on the council.

Murphy testified he had not been a Communist Party member in more than a year. Asked by Representative Joe Stranes (Democrat), Alabama, the sub-committee chairman, why he had joined, the witness responded:

"In 1934 the question of a trade union in the transport industry was a prominent issue. I would not have joined if the American Federation of Labor had done its job. But we were working a seven-day week, 14 hours a day, and the A. F. of L. did not come to our rescue."

Stay Out of War, Says Col. Roosevelt

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (AP).—The "preservation of representative democratic Government" overshadows all other problems in the United States, Col. Theodore Roosevelt said tonight at a celebration honoring the 151st anniversary tomorrow of the signing of the Constitution.

Speaking "not as a member of the Republican Party, but as an earnest lover of free democracy," Col. Roosevelt said:

"Everywhere our people are discussing what part we should play if a general European war comes. To me that role is clear. We should keep out of that war . . . we should fight only to defend our territory and free institutions. We must not be led into wars of vague and meddlesome benevolence."

Roosevelt Hails Mexico On Independence Day

President Roosevelt yesterday sent a telegram of greetings to President Cardenas on the occasion of the celebration of the Latin American republic's independence day.

"I extend cordial greetings to your excellency upon this national anniversary which the people of Mexico are celebrating today," the message stated.

Ribbentrop Hints to Briton War Clouds Will Pass Over

Foreign Minister Says Prime Minister Won't Need Umbrella, but Berliners Doubt His Prophecy as Nazi Propaganda Machine Unleashes New Blasts at Czechs

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Sept. 16.—"Don't worry about the weather—the clouds will clear suddenly and then there will be sunshine." These were the words quoted as having been employed by Joachim von Ribbentrop, when he made his official adieu to the British premier, Neville Chamberlain, under gray skies today before Chamberlain took off for London.

When Hitler and Chamberlain meet again the future of Europe may be decided. The meeting is scheduled to take place on Tuesday or Wednesday at Godesberg, near Bonn on the Rhine, at the Hotel Dreesen. When Hitler bade good-by to his guest at the "Berghof" last night, he courteously told him, "I regret that I, as the younger man, had to ask you to come all this way to see me. Next time I will come halfway to meet you."

The world wishes for nothing better than that the German foreign minister's farewell words to Chamberlain about sunshine being near, should be applied to the political weather too, and Hitler's utterances about meeting Chamberlain halfway could be understood also in a figurative sense.

As seen from this end, however, there does not seem to be much justification for optimism.

While Hitler took a day off and went for a long walk in the mountains, these were the developments today: It was learned from a reliable source, that contrary to reports from Prague, Konrad Henlein is not considered to have fled from Czechoslovokia. The German government knows where he is and is in permanent communication with him. Notwithstanding the warrant of arrest issued against him by the Czechs, he was at liberty at 7 p.m. Anyway, it was ascertained.

Frank, Henlein's deputy, made an appearance at Berchtesgaden today. It is presumed that he saw the Fuehrer. He left at 8 p.m.

Czech citizens in Berlin, Jena and Chemnitz were reported arrested as a countermeasure against the alleged mass arrests of Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia. Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels summoned all leaders of local Nazi organizations, including S. S. and S. A. this morning to give them "guiding lines warranted by the political situation." His utterances were enthusiastically received by the audience, the official report says. The powerful Nazi propaganda machine continues its anti-Czech press attacks at full pressure.

Apparently with the purpose of whipping up German public opinion to the highest degree of patriotism and all it may involve, the newspapers stress the viewpoint that Germany will not be satisfied with anything but a speedy divorce of Sudetenland from Czechoslovakia, and a union with the Reich, and that the world at large would be well-advised to face and put up with it.

'Reasons' Cited For 37 Additions To Merchant Fleet

By the Associated Press.

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the maritime commission, said last night that "sound business reasons and requirements of national defense" dictated this country's efforts to improve its merchant marine.

"It is not for boastful display that we would put our flag back on the mainmast of a great merchant fleet, nor have we been inspired by an uncontrolled burst of patriotism," he said in a radio speech.

Reviewing the activities of the commission, Land said the "beginnings of the new fleet are off the drawing boards."

Since last Jan. 1, he reported, the commission, either in co-operation with private operators or for its own account, has placed orders for 37 ships, including a fleet of fast modern tankers.

CCC Denies Puerto Rico Camps Were Demolished

By the Associated Press.

Civilian Conservation Corps officials contradicted yesterday statements by Senator Rafael Martinez Nadal, of Puerto Rico, that CCC camps costing $2,000,000 had been torn down on the island because Puerto Ricans objected to "regimentation" in camps.

Senator Martinez Nadal explained meanwhile that he had been "mistaken in confusing Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration camps with CCC camps. Conservation Corps officials said 18 CCC camps now were in operation in Puerto Rico and none had been demolished.

Japanese Attack Gateway to Vital Hankow Railway

Shanghai (Saturday), Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Prince Naruhiko Higashi Kuni's "Imperial" Japanese columns today were smashing at the outer defenses of Loshan, 30 miles east of Sinyang Station on the Peiping-Hankow Railway, and it was indicated the vital rail line would be cut during the week-end.

Sinyang is 95 miles north of Hankow and when it is taken the Japanese will control the northern railway approach to China's provisional capital and be in position to encircle an estimated 800,000 Chinese troops in the Hankow area.

The attack at Loshan followed consolidation of the Japanese occupation of Kwangchow, slightly to the southeast of Loshan, and the reduction of the last Chinese strongholds to the south and southeast around Shancheng and Macheng.

French Arrest German With Defense Pictures

Strasbourg, France, Sept. 16 (AP).—A German citizen identified by police only as "a professor of philosophy" was arrested on the French side of the Kehl Bridge over the Rhine today and charged with photographing defense works.

Police quoted the prisoner as declaring he wished only to photograph new German blockhouses and fortifications from the French side of the river to test the efficiency of the new German system of camouflage. Police said he had German diplomatic indorsement on his German passport.

Hitler Failure To Aid Puzzles Sudetens

Leaderless, Many of Nazis Feel Cause Is Lost; Members of Party Hard to Find

By the Associated Press.

Eger, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 16.—Bewilderment seeping through ranks of the Sedeten German minority today is making them wonder, rightly or wrongly, if something has gone amiss with their movement—especially those who saw in it eventual union with Germany.

Some Sudetens say privately that what they fought for is lost because Reichsfuehrer Hitler has not acted. Now they ask whether he ever will.

Konrad Henlein's proclamation Thursday demanding anschluss (union) has not changed their growing doubt, although the Sudeten Party leader assured them anschlus must now be considered.

It has taken two days for them to realize their headuarters is shot to pieces, their books have been seized and their fuehrer is a fugitive who cannot safely return to Czechoslovakia because of a treason charge against him.

Also some of them wonder if, contrary to their first beliefs, perhaps Prime Minister Chamberlain did not go to Berchtesgaden to accept German annexation of the Sudeten areas.

Tonight, Eger's central party headquarters is looking like last year's wind-tattered scarecrow—windows and doors shot out and walls gouged by machine-gun bullets as a result of Wednesday's battle with police.

Refuged in Germany with Henlein are some of his closest collaborators. Deputy Karl Frank's empty auto was found by Asch police today in the marketplace. Police said they presumed he too had fled.

Nazis Call Women Workers

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP).—Hitler decreed today the number of women in the Nazi labor service be increased from present 30,000 to 50,000 by April 1, 1939.

While labor service is compulsory for men, it still is voluntary for women. Government offices and many private concerns, however, have announced their intention not to employ women unless they have done their six months of labor service.

After October 1 all German veterans' federations will be merged into one organization, to be called the "National Socialist Reich's Veterans Bund," it was announced today.

Commission in Va. Continues Hearing On Blimp Hangar

The Virginia State Corporation Commission in Richmond yesterday continued until October 14 the hearing on whether the blimp hangar at Washington Airport should be removed, when it was learned that no permit for the structure's erection had ever been issued.

Leased from the National Airport Corporation by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. as a base for its blimp, Enterprise, the building has been in use about four years.

Samuel J. Solomon, vice president of the Airport corporation and manager of the terminal, was the only witness to testify yesterday. He explained that his company was occupying a neutral position, and added that the limit for developing the airport with private capital has been reached.

'Traveler' Jailed For Fake Passport

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—A mysterious world traveler, described in the indictment as Henry Huton, with many accompany aliases, was sentenced today to three years' imprisonment by Federal Judge Murray upon his plea of guilty to making false statements to obtain a passport.

No official source disclosed what Huton was supposed to have wanted with a fake passport or what his supposed international activities had been. Huton was arrested August 24 in Galveston, Tex., as he was about to board a ship.

Navy Board Favors Puerto Rico Base

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 16 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richard J. Hepburn, commander of the Twelfth Naval District at San Francisco, said today that a naval commission which he heads was unanimously impressed with Puerto Rico's strategic position for an air base as part of the new Atlantic defenses. The commission conferred with Puerto Rican civil and military officials today.

400 Cavalry Beaten Back in Md. War Game

Theoretically Defeated Horse Troops Claim Moral Victory Over Infantry

By the Associated Press.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Sept. 16.—Mimic warfare, engaging 5,000 Third Corps Area troops, raged over the length and breadth of this vast Army post today, with the roar of field pieces sounding potent accompaniment to a revival of the old "is Cavalry out of date?" debate.

Although theoretically defeated and beaten back to the banks of the Little Patuxent River by nightfall, some 400 cavalrymen, aided by 15 tanks and a few detachments of field artillery, claimed a moral victory in the umpires' decision "severe losses" had been inflicted on 4,000 invading doughboys.

After dark, the troops lined the banks of the river, with the "Red" defenders receiving reinforcements and preparing for a counter-attack on the "Blue" Infantry. The night maneuvers were expected to last until dawn.

Veteran army officers, including Brig. Gen. Dana T. Merrill, commander of the Provisional Brigade of Washington, observed the action through field glasses from hilltops. Many, noting the mobility of the cavalry, engaged in renewals of arguments over the long-standing and unsettled question of the value of mounted troops.

The problem today, part of a series of area maneuvers which will last until September 23, employed the "Red" cavalry and supporting units in a delaying action against the advancing "Blue" force.

After three hours of fighting, umpires ruled the superior infantry force had failed to take sufficient advantage of protective cover and had "lost" heavily under the fire of light and heavy machine guns sent into action by the dismounted cavalrymen.

An enveloping maneuver of the "Blue" force finally routed the defenders from their main position, and Col. Jonathon Wainwright, commanding the "Reds," ordered up a company of 15 light tanks to cover the retreat. These speedy mobile forts roared into action at 30 and 40 miles per hour, sweeping back and forth on the mile-long front, temporarily halting the attack.

Viennese Storm Czech School

Vienna, Sept. 16, (AP).—An angry crowd of 200 marched today to a Czech school in the Meidling district and smashed windows before police could intervene.

The mob was dispersed and no one was hurt. Meidling is Vienna's Czech center.

About the same time it was learned the managing editor of a Czech language newspaper and 13 other Czechs were arrested. The charges were not disclosed. Four of those arrested later were released.

Chamberlain Tells King Hitler's Terms

London

tor in Prague, who flew back to London to find out whether there is any further need for mediation.

Changing into dinner dress, the prime minister went to Buckingham Palace to report to the King on his historic talk with Hitler. He remained with the worried King for an hour and a quarter. Driving back to Downing street, the prime minister smiled and waved his hand at hundreds who pressed around him with shouts of "Good old Chamberlain." Chamberlain has won the respect and affection of the British public as never before in his long political career.

Despite Chamberlain's warning against unauthorized accounts of his conversations with Hitler, it is generally accepted Hitler bluntly demanded a plebiscite with a view to annexing the fringes of Czechoslovakia, which adjoin Germany and are mainly inhabited by Sudeten Germans.

Some Favor Revision

Although he has a conservative respect for the status quo, Chamberlain does not blanch at the idea of frontier revision, if such action is indicated to prevent another world war. Influential members of the Chamberlain cabinet are reported to favor transfer of Sudetenland to Germany, provided it is accomplished peacefully and with several guarantees, such as:

A pledge by Germany she would then be a satisfied power and would not attempt further expansion to the east or west, north or south.

A pledge by Germany, Italy, Russia, France and Britain to defend the revised frontier of Czechoslovakia.

Security for the Czechs and the Jews, who otherwise would be exposed to persecution in the transferred area.

Loans and economic concessions to compensate Prague somewhat for the loss of her rich industrial districts in Bohemia.

Demands Protectorate

In addition to a plebiscite to carry out his new enthusiasm for self-determination, Hitler is demanding an about-face in Prague's foreign policy, which would render the Czech Republic a vassal of Germany through abrogation of Prague's alliances with Russia and France.

Like Hitler, Chamberlain has no love for Moscow. It is assumed he would favor cancellation of Prague's alliances on condition the principal powers would guarantee the neutrality of Czechoslovakia as they do Belgium.

As a preliminary to a plebiscite, Germany and Czechoslovakia would be asked to demobilize their armies and to restrain their press and radio propaganda. The self-determination election might be preceded by a census of nationalities in Czechoslovakia, in case Poland and Hungary also claimed areas across the frontier, occupied by their minorities.

Able to Use Pressure

The fact that Prague already has served notice in London and Paris that she will not permit a plebiscite is not regarded as an insurmountable obstacle, as the Anglo-French axis is quite prepared to put additional pressure on the Czechs to prevent war, and the Czechs well know they must retain the backing of the British and French to save even part of their land from the German juggernaut.

The proposed partition of Czechoslovakia probably will be opposed by Laborites in Parliament, when it reconvenes in a week or so to pass judgement on the results of the Hitler-Chamberlain powwows. Chamberlain will be treading on dangerous ground if he asks too much of the Laborites and Liberals.

On touching English soil again after his aerial excursion to Germany, Prime Minister Chamberlain expressed the following message of hope:

"I have come back," he said, "rather quicker than I had expected, after a journey which, if I had not been so preoccupied, I should have found thoroughly enjoyable. Yesterday afternoon I had a long talk with Herr Hitler. It was a frank talk, but it was a friendly one, and I feel satisfied that now each of us fully understands what is in the mind of the other.

Refuses Discussion

"You won't, of course, expect me to discuss now what may be the results of that talk. What I've got to do now is to discuss them with my colleagues and I would advise you not to accept prematurely any unauthorized accounts of what took place in the conversation.

"I shall be discussing them tonight with my colleagues and with others, especially Lord Runciman, and later on, perhaps in a few days, I am going to have another talk with Herr Hitler, only this time he has told me that it is his intention to come half way to meet me. He wishes to spare an old man another such long journey."

Chamberlain, who flew away yesterday to Bavaria to talk peace with Hitler, was hailed as a conquering hero this evening when he flew back to Heston Airport and motored into Downing street to seek approval of his cabinet colleagues for the stiff terms laid down by the German dictator.

Crowd Meets Plane

The plane made a perfect landing at 5:30 o'clock at Heston, on the outskirts of London. It was followed immediately by a second airliner of the same type whose passengers were two Scotland Yard detectives who went out to Berchtesgaden to help Hitler's Storm troopers guard the prime minister.

As the first plane taxied up the asphalt runway, the hundreds of cheering spectators burst through the police cordons and surrounded the premier's ship. So great was the rush Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, and Dr. Theodore Kordt, the German charge d'affaires, fled for safety and bent double under one of the wings while photographs were taken of the prime minister. Halifax then stepped forward and warmly shook hands with Chamberlain, who was followed from the plane by his two advisers, Sir Horace Wilson and William Strang.

Chamberlain Cheered

"I hope you feel you were successful," Chamberlain was greeted by Dr. Kordt. "At any rate, you have conquered the hearts of my countrymen."

After speaking into microphones,

Back in England

Radiophoto from London shows Prime Minister Chamberlain wreathed in smiles after his flight from Germany, where he was in conference with Reichsfuehrer Hitler

Chamberlain read a personal letter from King George VI which had been brought to him from Downing street.

Chamberlain got into a waiting limousine. Lord Halifax rode beside him to get the first account of what went on at Berchtesgaden.

There was another demonstration half an hour later as the prime minister's car whizzed into Downing street. The police had closed that little dead-end thoroughfare but both sides of Whitehall were lined with people.

As a mighty cheer of welcome went up from the throng, Chamberlain smiled broadly and waved his hand in a gesture half like a Nazi salute.

His Wife Waits

The heroine of his homecoming was the mistress of No. 10, Mrs. Anne Chamberlain, who is called "Annie" by her devoted husband. Yesterday she had gone to Westminster Abbey to pray for peace and a happy landing.

Today she prayed at home. For 20 minutes before his arrival the prime minister's wife was waiting, watching for him at the door of No. 10.

Finally the cheers of the masses in Whitehall warned that her husband was rounding the corner and she scampered out to the curb. As Chamberlain stepped out of the car Mrs. Chamberlain welcomed him with open arms.

But Mrs. Chahberlain had to eat alone tonight as she did last night. The prime minister got tied up in a conference with his cabinet colleagues.

Runciman Unnoticed

The fickleness of fame was learned by Lord Runciman, who was British mediator in Prague until civil war broke out and Chamberlain decided to do business direct with the head of the German firm.

For weeks the Runciman mission has been on the front pages of the world's newspapers and hundreds of pictures have been published of the solemn little Englishman who negotiated with Hitler and Benes, and Herr Henlein. Tonight Lord Runciman walked to 10 Downing street unrecognized by a soul in the Whitehall crowd which had strained necks for Chamberlain.

Making his first airplane trip at the age of 67, Lord Runciman landed at Croydon in a Czechoslovakian liner a few minutes before the Lockheed deposited Chamberlain at Heston.

"You probably know as much about the situation as I do," Runciman told reporters.

May Not Return

Asked when he was likely to return to Prague, Runciman said, "I don't know. That is the lap of the gods."

Chamberlain's visit to Hitler was praised by the British Fascist Party and denounced by the Communists.

Willie Gallacher, M. P., presiding at the Communist Party Congress at Birmingham, the prime minister's home town, said Chamberlain had not gone to negotiate peace with Hitler but to betray Czechoslovakia and the other democracies.

Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Fascists, told an East End audience that Britain would fight for Britain, but not to stop one lot of Germans from joining another lot of Germans.

The leaders of the Labor Party and the Liberal Party preserved silence, pending official revelation of Hitler's proposals to Chamberlain.

Party were approaching him and he believed a new strong anti-Nazi party would be formed within the next few weeks.

The conservative wing of Henlein's party is meeting here this evening to consider the foundation of a "Bohemian's People's Party." This party, with the support of such former Henleinists as Ernst Kundt and Dr. Wilhelm Sebekowsky, probably will adopt the former Henlein program as outlined in the eight Carlsbad demands but reject the present Henlein program—anschluss with Germany.

The police today raided the offices of the Medical College of the German University in Prague on a tip from a former Henlein supporter. They opened coffins which had been lying around for months and found in them thousands of rounds of ammunition and revolvers and hand grenades.

Refugees in Reich

Reichenbach, Germany, near the Czechoslovak Frontier, Sept. 16 (AP). A steady stream of Sudeten Germans, estimated by German officials at 16,000, has poured across the border from Czechoslovakia into Germany, and tonight they still were coming.

By every means of conveyance and afoot, men, women and children came singly and in groups, to find temporary refuge in dance halls, assembly halls and gymnasiums converted into emergency quarters in German border towns.

Reich Trains Sudetens?

London (Saturday), Sept. 16 (U.P.). Ward Price, the London Daily Mail's correspondent at Adolf Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat, reported today 25,000 Sudetens fleeing across the border from Czechoslovakia are being organized in "free corps," ready to march back to their homeland with German army troops.

The correspondent, who is close to Hitler, said that "thousands of German airplanes are ready to take to the air on a moment's notice" and that Der Fuehrer may decide upon armed action without waiting for his scheduled second conference with Prime Minister Chamberlain next week.

The possibility of armed action is becoming greater by the hour, the Daily Mail reported, because of the Prague government's activities in suppressing the Sudetens.

Kin of King George Buried in England

London, Sept. 16 (AP).—Prince Arthur of Connaught, grandson of Queen Victoria and first cousin of King George VI, was buried today with full military honors in historic St. George's Chapel at Windsor Castle. He died Monday at the age of 55.

King George and the Duke of Kent headed a procession from Windsor Station to the chapel through Windsor Village after a 21-gun salute.

United States Ambassador Kennedy was among those attending a memorial service in the St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Church in London.

Roosevelt Talks With Cabinet 2 Hours on European Crisis

Roosevelt

such a session; notably, the intense and little-concealed Administration dissatisfaction with the present "cash-and-carry" neutrality act, and the probable need for revision of laws affecting international finance relations.

One factor stood decisively against such a session: the near-success in the House last session of the Ludlow amendment to the Constitution, heavily supported by all the peace groups, which would require a popular referendum before the declaration of war by this country.

Sees Norman Davis

After the early conference with Hull and Morgenthau, the President lunched with Norman Davis, head of the American Red Cross, and the former American Ambassador-at-large.

Davis talked cheerfully with reporters, stressing his belief that peace prospects had improved in the past few days because of the Chamberlain-Hitler conversations. He added:

"The people of Europe do not want war. I think the chances of avoiding a war are better today than they were a few days ago."

The President canceled a speaking engagement or tomorrow at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he had been slated to address the 150th anniversary celebration of the first Constitutional Convention in the Nation, when New York ratified the Constitution.

He also made "tentative" a previous engagement to speak Tuesday at Chattanooga, Tenn., on the anniversary of the Chickamauga battle of the Civil War.

White House Press Secretary Stephen T. Early took pains to minimize "war scare" headlines at his regular daily press conference, and several times referred reporters asking about American "moral alliances" to Great Britain and France to the President's Hyde Park statement that this country has not entered any alliances with European democracies in any "Stop-Hitler" movement.

Since the President has avoided invoking the neutrality act in the undeclared war between Japan and China, many observers believe he would not invoke it in the event of a European war. Many believe Mr. Roosevelt did not invoke it in the Far Eastern conflict on the basis that it would seriously injure China, since under the law munitions or war supplies could only be purchased here by cash-and-carry buyers who could transport the materials away. Since this operates to the advantage of those nations with powerful navies, Great Britain and her allies would have an immediate and almost insuperable trade advantage over Germany.

Would Close Exchanges

Financial agencies, studying war moves, have decided here that the Securities and Exchange Commission is empowered to close the stock exchanges for 10 days on its own initiative and for 30 days with Presidential approval; that the Treasury could impose foreign exchange control to regulate the transfer of funds to and from this country; that the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System could curb speculation by restricting or halting the use of bank credit for margin trading, and that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could, under its blanket authority, buy securities and finance other agencies. It would operate in such emergencies as general foreign efforts to liquidate American securities in large blocks, or if foreign governments required immediate liquidation of their citizens' American holdings to obtain cash for materials.

The total of foreign-owned securities here now is estimated at about $7,600,000,000. The Treasury bought $276,028,315 of foreign gold in the first two weeks of September.

Representative Fish, (Republican) New York, last night declared the Administration's foreign policy erroneously had encouraged Great Britain and France to believe the United States would join them in another European war.

He said in a radio address:

"The New Deal foreign policy of bluff and bluster, concerted action, parallel action and offers to police and quarantine the world is a complete departure from the traditional foreign policies of our country, and where has it gotten us?

"It has alarmed the American people and caused a war psychology to spread throughout the Nation. It has embittered our relations with Japan, Germany and Italy and has destroyed our moral influence for the promotion of peace. It has unfairly and without foundation encouraged France and Great Britain to expect us to join them in another European war."

Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National Bank, of St. Louis, was one of the monetary experts called in yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau to confer with him and other Treasury officials. He declined to disclose the nature of his conversations.

Treasury officials declined to comment on published reports that the sudden dispatch of a number of American destroyers from Portsmouth, England, to Gravesend, was ordered by the Navy Department at the request of the Treasury.

Accroding to reports the ships will be in readiness to transport gold from England to the United States in the event private underwriters refuse to insure gold cargoes because of war.

One of the basic factors in the operation of the tri-partite agreement is the ability of the signatories—England, the United States, and France—to ship the gold unencumbered. Some financial authorities foresee serious dangers to the operation of the agreement and a disruption in the monetary stability of the signatories if gold shipments are prevented.

The threat to world peace brought about by the Czechoslovak crisis will be discussed at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the National Press Club auditorium by the French labor leader, Leon Jouhaux, and Barnet Nover, Washington Post columnist.

Christian Heurich Finds Reich Beer NoBetterThan U.S.

Christian Heurich, who marked his ninety-sixth birthday in mid-ocean this past week while making his seventy-first transatlantic crossing, returned to Washington yesterday firm in his belief that American beer is just as good as German.

Heurich has been a master brewer for 82 years, 66 in Washington. But according to Mrs. Heurich, he will admit that Pilsener beer—made in Czechoslovakia—is of superior quality, due to the unique water in the Pilsener region.

Looking fresh and hearty—"Twenty years younger," says Mrs. Heurich, who accompanied him abroad—Heurich immediately made a tour of his brewery here. He is still active in its operation.

Japanese Raise Rates on War Risk

Tokyo (Saturday), Sept. 17 (AP).—The Federation of Japanese Marine Insurance Companies today raised war risk rates for British, French, German and Italian ships destined for European ports.

The Sudeten German-Czechoslovak crisis was given as the reason.

Tokyo's stock market reacted unfavorably to war reports, though prior to Prime Minister Chamberlain's visit to Reichsfuehrer Hitler prices had been on the upgrade.

Nazi Trade Drops In South America

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP).—German imports for August exceeded exports by 64,500,000 marks (about $25,800,000) with exports to South American countries, especially manufactured goods, instruments, machinery and coal, showing a marked decline.

In July exports and imports were approximately in balance. Imports from North and South America increased 10,500,000 marks ($4,200,000) as compared with August last year. Imports for the month were listed as 509,500,000 marks and exports, 445,000,000.

Foreign Events Called 'Whirlpool' By French Envoy

International events at present are in such a "whirlpool" that Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, French ambassador, who has just returned to his post here after a trip to his native land, is keeping in closest possible touch with developments.

"That's part of my job, you know," he remarked yesterday when reached immediately after he conferred with Dr. Fernando de los Rios, the ambassador from Spain.

Parrying all questions concerning the difficulties between Germany and Czechoslovakia, Count de Saint-Quentin indicated there is small possibility that any settlement of the Spanish civil war can be effected in the immediate future, but he was quick to add the question had not been discussed with Dr. de los Rios.

Reds Block Czech Peace, Italy Says

Gayda Takes Dark View, Urges Quick Action on Partition and Cantonizing of Nation

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 16.—Virginio Gayda, the authoritative Fascist editor, declared today "extraneous forces of European disorder are bolstering Czechoslovak resistance."

He wrote in Il Giornale D'Italia that Georgi Dimitroff, secretary general of the Communist International, was in Prague, Czechoslovak capital.

Gayda urged quick action on the so-called Mussolini plan for separation of minority territory from Czechoslovakia and cantonization (establishment of local self-government) of regions populated by mixed nationalities.

"In dark hours the unexpected is always possible and fatal," Gayda wrote.

4-Power Settlement

Dispatches from abroad hinted at the possibility that Germany, Britain, France and Italy would open talks for solution of the German-Czechoslovak crisis and possibly would broaden the discussion to include the Spanish war, armaments, colonies and such matters at the root of the four powers' anxieties.

Gayda said Italians could not share what he termed British and French optimism "without great reserve." For this the editor cited three reasons:

"First. Good will and particularly the resolution to end the Czechoslovak problem" are not yet sufficiently widespread.

"Second. While the gravity of a moment which is red with blood requires urgent solution . . . time is still lost and slow action is indulged in, the effect of which cannot be wiped out by the courageous flight of Chamberlain.

"Third. Forces contrary to any pacifying and final solution for the national minority in revolt against Czechoslovakia are still present and active and are forming a common front with most diverse elements and maddest intentions."

Foreign Minister Ciano during the afternoon received Sir Noel Charles, British charge d'affaires, for what was described as a "long, cordial talk" on the European situation.

Russia Fears Isolation

Moscow, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia tonight interpreted developments in the European crisis as the beginning of a move to isolate this country and draw Britain and France into a united front of capitalist nations against communism.

"German Chancellor Adolf Hitler's main objective in Czechoslovakia is not to protect his oppressed German brethern (the Sudeten Germans) but to bring pressure upon Czechoslovakia to abrogate her pacts of mutual assistance with France and the U. S. S. R.," the Geneva correspondent of the newspaper Izvestia telegraphed.

The correspondent viewed British Prime Minister Chamberlain's action in flying to Germany to confer with Hitler as a "profound humiliation for Britain, comparable to the exploits of the Chrisitan martyrs who stopped at no sacrifices in order to preach the gospel."

Anti-Red Steps Outlined

As the Russians viewed the situation Germany's moves are part of the general program of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis which was formed to isolate this country and eventually destroy the Soviet experiment in communist government.

The first step, Moscow believed, will be to break the alliances of the U. S. S. R. with France and Czechoslovakia and substitute for them a four-power agreement among Germany, Italy, France and Britain for the general preservation of European peace.

Japan would be loosely bound in such an agreement because of her agreements with Germany and Italy against the Moscow communist international and would attempt to isolate Russia in the Orient just as Germany is attempting to isolate this country in Europe.

Airmen Kill 130 Arabs in Biggest Palestine Battle

Jerusalem, Sept. 16 (AP).—An official announcement tonight said 130 Arabs were killed by British airmen in the largest engagement fought in Palestine since the World War.

The battle occurred last yesterday near Ramallah, north of Jerusalem, after the pilot of a scouting plane sighted several hundred armed Arabs and summoned 12 other craft.

Reports said the Arabs were unable to find shelter as the aircraft swooped down upon them with machine gun firing. Several planes were struck, but returned safely.

Hudson's Bay Co. Sues for Its Label

The Hudson's Bay Co., whose founders stretched a mercantile empire through Canada when the continent was new and business was an adventure, asked the Federal District Court yesterday to compel registration of its trade-mark for whisky and brandy. The company said Conway P. Coe, Commissioner of Patents, refused to register the trade-mark because he found it would be confused with that of a Louisville liquor firm.

The company claimed priority and pointed out that it was founded in 1670 under a charter granted by King Charles II of England. At that time it was known as the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay.

No Music, Artist Tells Duce, and Here's Your Medal

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Artur Rubenstein, Polish pianist, has canceled a proposed tour of Italy because of new Italian laws affecting Jews, his American manager, S. Hurok, said today.

Hurok said the artist had returned to Premier Mussolini the Order of Commander of the Italian Cross which Il Duce had conferred upon him, along with an autographed photograph Mussolini had given him.

Two Washington Churches Will Mark 144 Years of History During Week-End

First Congregational, Church of Coolidges, Marks Its 73d Birthday Today

Mrs. Sarah N. Eastman, 93, one of the two surviving charter members of the First Congregational Church, sat in the living room of her home in East Falls Church yesterday afternoon and recalled the days when she and her family played important roles in the life of a struggling infant church, now grown to maturity, and today celebrating its seventy-third birthday.

Listening to Dr. C. B. Boynton, first pastor of the organized congregation, preach at the House of Representatives, where services were held pending construction of a new church, stands out vividly in her mind.

She also recalled with pleasure the "magnetic personality" of "Christian General" Oliver O. Howard, First Congregational parishioner, and Civil War military leader, one of the founders of the university bearing his name.

"He was a tremendous power for raising funds for the new church," she said, describing how this pioneer wrote with his left hand (the right had been shot off in the war) more than 500 letters to influential Congregationalists throughout the country, seeking building funds.

Second Couple Wed There

She and her husband, the late Albert N. Eastman, who died in 1915, the fiftieth anniversary year, were the second couple to be married in the present church, on Christmas Eve, 1869, by the Rev. Jeremiah E. Rankin, successor to Dr. Boynton.

The inaugural services of the church were held in the old Unitarian Church at Sixth and D streets northwest, September 17, 1865, Mrs. Eastman recollected.

Later services were conducted in a hall over Metzerott's (later Droop's) music store, 923 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and in the old Columbia Law Building, Fifth street, between D and E. The members met on November 12, 1865, and on the 15th the council recognized the church, with 104 on the roll.

Helped Start Thanksgiving

Mrs. Eastman's father, the Rev. William Russell, retired cleric, who settled here in '63, and Ebenezer A. Robinson, father of Miss Mary L. Robinson, the other living original member, served on the first Congregational committee which called on President Johnson October 2, 1865, asking that a national day of Thanksgiving be set aside. Thus they helped bring the holiday about.

Literary royalty used the church in October, 1889, when a group of American authors gathered to press for enactment of a copyright law. Mark Twain and James Whitcomb Riley recited pieces from their latest books, and Thomas Nelson Page, Frank R. Stockton, Edward Eggleston, Charles Dudley Warner, William D. Howells, Richard A. Stoddard and James T. Field contributed to the program.

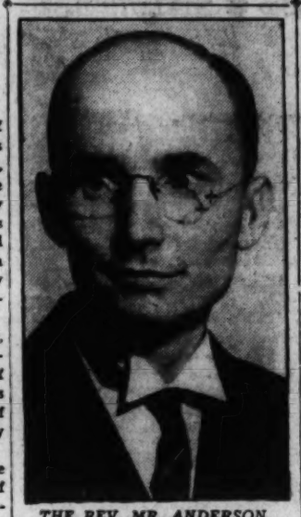
While the Coolidges occupied the White House they were actively connected with the First Congregational Church, and Mrs. Eastman likes to remember the afternoon the First Lady was her hostess at a garden party. Mrs. Coolidge still is an associate member.

Abbot Long a Member

Among other prominent members of the congregation, Mrs. Eastman recalls, are Gen. Eliphalet Whittlesey, associate of Howard; James B. Johnson, superintendent of the Lincoln Mission Sunday school in "Hell's Bottom"; Supreme Court Justice David J. Brewer, teacher of a Sunday school class for many years, and William R. Pennell, known as the "first Christian Endeavorer."

Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian, is a friend of long standing, and joined the church in '99. Dr. John W. Bischoff, the blind organist, served the church for 34 years.

In addition to the Rev. Messrs. Boynton and Rankin, the church has had the following ministers in its history: the Rev. Stephen M. Newman, 1884-1906; Dr. Samuel Woodrow, 1907-13; Dr. Jay T. Stocking, 1914-15; the Rev. James L. Gordon, 1916-19; Dr. James Noble Pierce, 1920-30; the Rev. Allan A. Stockdale, 1931-35, and Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, 1936, the present pastor.



THE REV. MR. ANDERSON, First Congregational Minister

Anthem Composed By Dr. Bischoff Will Be Played at First Congregational

"Open to Me the Gates," an anthem composed by Dr. J. W. Bischoff, blind organist who served First Congregational for 34 years, will be sung by the choir at the morning anniversary service as well as "Hark, Hark, My Soul," another old favorite anthem.

"Civilization's Cornerstone" will be Dr. Howard Stone Anderson's topic.

Mount Pleasant. "The Lift of the Spiritual" is the sermon subject of Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, minister, at the 11 o'clock service of worship.

The planning conference for church school officers and teachers of the Mount Pleasant-Cleveland Park and Vanderwerken Churches is being held this afternoon and evening at Holiday House on the Mount Vernon boulevard below Alexandria, and tomorrow morning at Cleveland Park Church, Thirty-fourth and Lowell streets.

Tomorrow St. Mark's Episcopal Will Have Been 50 Years in Present Building

Tomorrow, at 11 a. m., St. Mark's Parish will commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the present church building.

St. Mark's Parish, now 71 years old, had its beginning in the old Daingerfield House, now occupied by the National Woman's Party, on the corner of Second and B streets northeast. By 1870, however, the congregation had moved its place of worship to its present site at Third and A streets southeast.

Many persons now attending St. Mark's can remember the low, wooden building facing Third street, in which the services were then held.

On September 17, 1888, while the Rev. A. Floridus Steele was rector, the cornerstone of the present building was laid by the Rev. Dr. Addison, dean of the convocation of Washington. The present diocese of Washington had not yet been formed, and the Episcopal churches of this city were under the jurisdiction of Maryland.

First Service in February

The first service in the completed structure was held the following February, and the present anniversary celebration, which officially begins with the service tomorrow, will continue with a series of services and activities throughout the fall and winter seasons, and will include an eight-day preaching mission, to be held in November, a home-coming celebration, scheduled for the first Sunday in December, and a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the first service in the present building, on February 26, 1939, at which the Right Rev. James E. Freeman has been asked to speak.

An important feature of the anniversary celebration will be a drive in January to free the parish entirely from debt. Additions to the already rich collection of stained glass will be made during the fall.

Has Fine Stained Glass

The St. Mark's Church building, now 50 years old, is widely noted among architects for its unusual design. The church, in many of its features, follows the plan of the Church of the Holy Nativity, which was built by the Emperor Constantine, in 328 A. D., over the spot in Bethlehem where the Savior was born.

St. Mark's has a great wealth of stained glass—perhaps the finest single collection in a parish church in this city. The church was the first pro-Cathedral of the Diocese of Washington, and has been under the rectorship of several notable men, including the Rev. A. F. Steele, the Rev. William L. DeVries, the Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, the Rev. William H. Pettus, and the Rev. Hulbert A. Woolfall.

The anniversary service tomorrow will be conducted by the Rev. William R. Moody, present rector of St. Mark's, and chairman of the department of religious education of the Diocese of Washington. The Rev. Mr. Moody will preach the sermon. The lesson will be read by James Conner, who has been assisting in the parish this summer. Music will be rendered by the summer choir, under the direction of Mrs. Ruth Carow, who will be at the organ. During the service Miss Barbara Carow will sing Handel's "Largo."

Growers Seek Tobacco Mart At Hughesville

Tobacco

Southern Maryland tobacco growers, "disgusted" with the prices they are receiving for their crop on the Baltimore market, are threatening to support a rival market at Hughesville in Charles County, it was learned last night.

Within the next two weeks mass meetings of growers in Marylahd's tobacco belt will be held to discuss a Farm Bureau proposal to establish a "loose leaf" market at Hughesville, where their crop may be auctioned.

The new system would be patterned after the marketing practices in the West and in North and South Carolina.

At a meeting of Farm Bureau committees from Anne Arundel, Prince Georges, Charles, St. Marys, and Calvert counties, a resolution was adopted indorsing a proposal by Crosby Wyche, of Charlotte Hall, to set up the "loose-leaf" market.

Wyche said he would be willing to finance the undertaking providing he could be assured the market would handle at least 1,000,000 pounds of tobacco. The purpose of the meetings will be to determine the sentiment of growers to this proposal.

The Farm Bureau committee, appointed several weeks ago to investigate complaints against conditions at the Baltimore market, reported growers were so "disgusted and dissatisfied with the present system of marketing their crop that they appeared willing to make any change."

W. R. C. Connick, president of the Prince Georges County Farm Bureau, pointed out that under the present system growers ship their tobacco in hogheads to Baltimore, where it is graded and sold by commission merchants. The entire crop is bought by six companies, he said.

Reports the prices, which are ranging from 6 to 7 cents per pound lower than was paid last year, have been fixed through agreement of the buyers, are under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The investigation was launched at the request of Representative Lewis during his unsuccessful campaign to unseat Senator Tydings in the Democratic primary.

Connick said the total cost of marketing tobacco under the system now used is about $6.00 a hogshead. Under a "loose-leaf" system, he said, growers would not have to pack their crop in hogsheads and would save on hauling and insurance. The total saving to the grower per 600-pound hogshead of tobacco would be about $2.00, Connick said.

Under the "loose-leaf" system, growers would haul their crop in wagons. Buyers would examine it and bid for it. Another advantage, Connick said, was that growers would not have to wait until the spring following harvesting of their crop to market it.

Tobacco, he explained, cannot be packed until the spring after the crop is harvested because in about April or May it undergoes a fermentation. If this occurs while the tobacco is tightly packed in hogsheads, the plants rot.

With the loose-leaf system, the tobacco will be marketed in December following its harvesting.

Strike Paralyzes 50 to 85% of N. Y. Truck Industry

men's Bureau of New York, said that nothing had been done to end the strike and that no meeting yet had been scheduled between striking truckmen and their employers. McKeever met with other officials of the bureau tonight while union leaders debated the strike in another part of the city.

McKeever said he did not believe more than 50 per cent of the city's trucking had been stopped. Other estimates ranged to 85 per cent, while some of the larger firms reported they were 100 per cent immobile. Police Inspector John W. Conway said earlier today that "strikers have tied up everything along the waterfront."

The strike began after the chairman of one of the three locals—whose joint wage committee negotiated as a unit for contracts with employer groups—refused to entertain a strike motion.

During negotiations for a new contract into which the union wanted written a 40-hour week instead of the prevailing 47, terms of the old contract, which had expired September 1, were continued.

Benefactor Beaten, 3 Marines Seized

Three Marine Corps rookies from Quantico Barracks were arrested at pistol-point early yesterday by a Virginia State trooper after they had beaten a benefactor who had given them a ride, and had stolen his automobile.

The prisoners, who came from behind the shrubbery in the woods near Accotink with their hands in the air, were held in Fairfax County Jail, charged with theft of an automobile and assault. They registered as Privates Frederick L. Phek, Murphy L. Allran and William A. Marshall, all 18 and serving their first enlistment.

Victim of the attack was Bernard Cross, 32-year-old Potomac Yards worker, whose home is in Occoquan. Cross told police he was on his way home in his car about 4 a.m. when the men hailed him and asked him for a ride in Alexandria. He headed south.

"Well, boys, I've got to turn off here," said Cross, when he reached Accotink.

One of the Marines slugged him with a homemade blackjack, and they all beat him and threw him out of the car, Cross asserted.

As they drove away he called the garage in Accotink and State Policeman E. C. Trice gave chase in his police car. Abandoning the stolen automobile, the Marines darted into the woods and hid back of thickets. Trice drew his gun, demanded they surrender, and they gave themselves up. Marine authorities questioned them at the jail yesterday and then returned to Quantico, leaving them to civil authorities.

O'Connor Will Be Lucky to Win, Vote Survey Indicates

O'Connor

as a "500-per-cent Roosevelt man."

O'Connor's shrewd, happy campaign manager, Jim McCarthy, seriously believes that "The Big Boy" will win both Democratic and Republican nominations. He estimates the O'Connor ratio as three-to-one against Fay in the Democratic primary, and at slightly less than three-to-two in the Republican primary against Dulles.

But careful surveys disclose that these margins are exceedingly dubious. Broken down to bald facts and barring sudden shifts before Tuesday, the truth appears that O'Connor will be lucky to win either primary. It is certain that he has a slight margin at present over Fay, but no "smart money" can be found in New York tonight on either Republican candidate.

For Jimmy Fay is burning up the lower East Side with straightforward, frank Irish oratory, delivering one telling blow after another; and his aides, completely unable to match the huge O'Connor war chest, have cleverly resorted to "pacing" their campaign with the utmost care, so that it is just now hitting its final peak over the week-end. His managers specifically cited the Tydings-Lewis campaign in Maryland as an example of "bad pacing," as they believe Lewis' fight reached its peak too soon and then dropped off substantially. They have saved their rather meager funds until this last week, and only now is the lid off, as the Fay message is brought home to every possible voter.

The methods of the campaigners are in as sharp contrast as their headquarters and their workers. Fay's campaign is being waged out of a few rickety, old, carpetless wooden-walled rooms above a Third Avenue pawnshop, whose three dingy golden balls dangle sadly below a campaign banner.

O'Connor's ideas work in a lush eight-room suite at the Hotel Commodore, across the street from the sky-piercing Chrysler Tower and from the great vaulted Grand Central Station.

With a few exceptions Fay's workers are a little shabby; some are unshaven. Most of them talk the "dese, dose, and dem" argot of the East Side. They quarrel constantly in the fierce, good-natured fashion of the tenement streets, dangling cigarettes jerking about in their mouths as they talk around the smoke.

O'Connor's workers, universally neat in well-pressed business suits, their collars and manners impeccable, work in comparative ease at comfortable desks; smartly-dressed stenographers labor at the more literate newspaper crossword puzzles while reception rooms are channeled so that businessmen and employers seeking literature to distribute in their plants are sifted out from the ward heelers seeking more and bigger banners for their precincts.

O'Connor addresses businessmen's luncheon clubs in hotels. Fay stumps the street-corners each evening, roaring hearty oratory from moving-vans rigged up with public-address amplifiers.

But neither candidate invades the hushed elegance of Sutton place, where a loudspeaker on a corner would bring a lifting of plucked eyebrows and a rush of squad cars to the scene of the disturbance.

Here, however, and all down the imposing cold stone front of Park avenue, there lie 10,000 solid Republican votes, and the fight for these is just as strenuous as for the 31,000 Democratic vote sthat are spread all over the odorous, jostling, push-cart section that is the East Side of New York.

Put bluntly, many influential Republicans are contributing money and strength to O'Connor's Republican candidacy in an effort to make the primaries a resounding defeat for the President. But other Republicans, stressing what they feel is the bad logic of accepting as a Republican a "cast-off Democrat" are fighting O'Connor vigorously, the more so since they believe Allen Dulles represents the very finest liberal views in the Republican Party.

Dulles is well and widely esteemed, even in the White House. Brought up in the State Department tradition—his grandfather was John W. Foster, Secretary of State under President Harrison, his uncle was Robert W. Lansing, Secretary under President Wilson—Dulles became a career man in the foreign service at 23.

In ten years he was chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs at the department. But his limited private income, supplemented by the small salary, was insufficient to meet the demands of expensive diplomatic life. After studying law at night for two years he resigned in 1926, a diplomatic veteran, 33 years old.

As a brilliant lawyer on Wall street, his ability was recognized by both Presidents Hoover and Roosevelt. He served Norman Davis, American ambassador-at-large, as legal advisor at Geneva in 1932-33.

But Dulles is no ball of fire on the stump. There both O'Connor and Fay can whip him among the 31,000 Democrats and 2,000 American Labor Partyites.

For it is on the platform that Fay's wooden leg is visible to the sympathetic voters, and it is on the platform that O'Connor's broad, red face works up into horrifying grimaces as he mouths distastefully the word:

"Purge!"

tomers. Each night she would take them to him.

The money flowed in so fast they decided to "go legitimate," with Mrs. Greulich helping her husband.

Yesterday Mrs. Greulich handed her resignation to Capt. Nowell-Usticke, effective today, ending 14 years with her employer.

Cash Till Trapped Her

Even then, the years of peculation might have gone undetected, except for one final error — so great was Capt. Nowell-Usticke's trust in her honesty. He had called in detectives two weeks ago to investigate disappearance of two valuable sets of stamps from his office. When they suggested Mrs. Greulich was taking money from the cash register, he told them they must be mistaken.

The detectives placed certain $10 bills in the cash drawer, marked with invisible crosses of chemical.

Last evening Capt. Nowell-Usticke bade his trusted employe goodnight. Then he glanced in the cash till, and, by prearranged signal, crossed to the window and waved a handkerchief to a detective across the street.

Held in $15,000 bail the Greulichs waived examination.

Stole for Luxurious Home

"We stole because we wanted luxurious things and an expensive home, Mrs. Greulich said.

Detectives searched their lavishly-appointed 6-room home at Woodside, Long Island, and reported finding:

A total of $9,664 in cash, variously cached in vanity cases, in a shoebox and under a heap of 15 tailored men's shirts; $5,000 in securities, bankbooks showing a $5,000 balance, $500 worth of silk underwear; oriental rugs, valuable bound books and furnishings insured for $15,000; an expensive new automobile, several motion picture projection machines and a number of violins and guitars (which neither played), four pairs of riding boots, 15 tailored suits—and an amazing array of "gadgets."

When detectives found $400 hidden under Greulich's shirts, the little man's jaw dropped.

"That was for a wedding anniversary present for my wife," he exclaimed. "I forgot all about it!"

Employe Admits $150 Thefts From District Building

Police last night held a 44-year-old colored man, employed at the District Building for almost 22 years, in the theft of $150 worth of clothing and radios from the building.

Detective J. E. Kane, of the First Precinct, said the man, employed on repair work, admitted thefts dating back to April 1. Kane found three radios in the man's room, and also recovered several suits and valuable tools.

Police were looking for a second-story man who stole $20 from a house at 1433 Decatur street northwest. Kate Sherby reported the loss of $8, and D. R. Simon, $12.

Two white men, one of them armed, held up and took $40 from Jerry Sullivan, manager of a gas station at Champlain street and Florida avenue northwest, about 7 a. m., yesterday. Sullivan told police he thought the pair might be the same that robbed him of $50 recently.

Hypnotist Guilty In Woman's Death

Los Angeles, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—A Superior Court jury late today returned a verdict of guilty against Robert Avery Gilbert, former vaudeville hypnotist, accused of contributing to the sudden death of a young Glendale housewife, who was an expectant mother.

The jury, after deliberating three hours and a half, convicted the 49-year-old former headliner of conspiracy to perform an abortion on Mrs. Marie Colombos last June 30.

Boy, 5, Calls Help When Mother Falls in Skylight

Dickie Jones, who is only 5, learned to mind, so his mother probably will recover from injuries she suffered yesterday when she fell 15 feet through the cover of a skylight at her home, 206 Maryland avenue, Riverdale, Md.

"Dickie, I've fallen and I'm hurt," gasped Mrs. Peggy Jones, 25. "Get the neighbors. Tell them to bring help."

Dickie obeyed the call as though she had told him to go on an errand.

The Bladensburg rescue squad took Mrs. Jones to Providence Hospital. Physicians said her right arm was fractured and that she suffered from shock, but that she would recover.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

Unequal Relief Benefits

The division of child welfare has done well to call attention to the inequalities of the present chaotic relief system which makes it impossible to adjust payments to family needs. The criticism is especially telling because it is voiced by a District agency distressed because of its inability properly to care for neglected and dependent children.

"Faced by limitations in funds for home relief," the report says, the agencies had to face the question "whether the children should be supported cheaply and badly in their own homes which no longer had much to give, or more expensively, but presumably more constructively, in foster care."

Belief is expressed, however, that family readjustments could be much more frequently effected, enabling a large percentage of unfortunate children to be properly cared for in their own homes, if a more equitable relief system were in operation. "It seems worth while," the report says, "to study even the replacement, at least in part, of the WPA by a system of Federal grants in aid to States, letting the State choose whether relief shall be direct or work."

Such a suggestion seems almost heretical coming from a public agency engaged in local relief work. Its reasonableness is, however, amply demonstrated by supporting data. It is pointed out that even before the advent of social security, six or seven categories of dependency were recognized, such as veterans' relief, aid to fatherless children in their homes, institutional care for the aged and infirm, etc. In addition we now have Federal work relief.

The result of this unco-ordinated program is great and irrational inequalities in the amount of relief funds granted. In Washington last year some families of 7 or 8 existed on WPA wages amounting to $48 per month. Another family of equal size might under the Aid to Dependent Children Service receive as much as $100 per month. And a third family just as large and needy might receive a maximum sum of $60 per month through the Board of Public Welfare—a payment adjusted not in accordance with need but with regard to the limitations upon general relief appropriations.

The injustice and essential wastefulness of this failure to adjust payments to need is the strongest possible argument in favor of a complete reformation and unification of relief programs along the lines suggested by the division of child welfare. The Federal Government could not only make a relief dollar go much further by allocating it to communities where needs are greatest; it could also improve the local administration of relief by insisting upon reforms that would correct the inequalities of the present "categorical program of public assistance."

Halfway To What?

"He has told me," said Chamberlain quoting Hitler, "that it is his intention to come halfway to meet me. He wishes to spare an old man another such long journey."

The Fuehrer's solicitude for the British prime minister's comfort is praiseworthy. But it is not particularly important where the next round of conversations will be held. What is important is the spirit in which this forthcoming meeting will be held. If Hitler shows a willingness to meet Chamberlain halfway not only in a geographical sense but in a spiritual sense as well, a distinct easing of the international situation may follow.

Certainly both the British and French governments are eager for a compromise, almost any compromise, in fact, that would save the peace of Europe and the world. The very circumstance that Chamberlain, putting pride and precedent in his pocket, made his dramatic trip to Berchtesgaden is abundant proof of this.

But if Hitler is unreasonable in his demands, if he shows no disposition to accept any practical settlement of the German-Czechoslovak dispute, if, in other words, he confuses compromise with capitulation, the next meeting with Chamberlain cannot be expected to produce constructive results.

In this connection the Associated Press report from Berlin regarding Hitler's demands anent Czechoslovakia is not reassuring. According to this dispatch, the Fuehrer not only insists on the cession to Germany of the Sudeten area but also demands the effective subordination of Czechoslovakia to the Third Reich in matters of foreign policy and economic life. If this report is true, Hitler's price for peace is the complete destruction of Czechoslovakia's independence and the transformation of the little republic into a German satrapy.

Can Chamberlain give even tacit support to such a program? Can the French? The will to peace is very strong in both countries. It is also strong in Czechoslovakia. This abhorrence of war and the desire to avoid it at almost any cost may prove strong enough, when put to the test, to override all other considerations. But Hitler cannot reasonably proceed on that assumption. There is such a thing as asking too much even from those prepared to give up a great deal.

Washington's Budget

Budget hearings always bring forth conflicting objectives. Naturally citizens would like to see taxes kept to the lowest practical minimum. At the same time they do not wish to forego civic improvements that have long been urgent. In the end, all budget making is a compromise between these two viewpoints.

The Board of Trade emphasized a sound general principle when it advised the District Commissioners to keep their estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1940 within the limits of revenue expectancy. A similar plea had been made by William McK. Clayton, who fears that any substantial increase in the budget would lead to a higher real estate tax. That levy, he rightly contends, is already too high.

One of the foremost duties of the Board of Commissioners is to keep a balance between the District's income and outgo. Under the law it is compelled to adjust tax rates if appropriations exceed anticipated revenue. At present, however, Washington's tax structure is undergoing an expert analysis directed by the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. The prospect of obtaining a modernized tax system appears to be better than it has been at any time in recent years.

No one can foresee how much revenue this prospective tax system will yield. Hence it would be rather difficult to devise a budget on the basis of probable revenue. A more practical approach would be to adjust proposed expenditures to the reasonable needs of the District. Certainly public health, police protection, unemployment relief, education and similar municipal functions should not be neglected because an antiquated tax system has not in the past provided sufficient funds properly to maintain these services.

It could scarcely be said that neglect of public health, for example, is an economy. Should the Commissioners build their new budget on the revenue expected from the present tax laws the probabilities are not only that some municipal services would be neglected but also that tax reforms would be delayed. The real hope of reducing the exorbitant real estate tax lies in the tapping of other sources of revenue, and not in the delay of urgent municipal projects.

On the other hand, the District has obtained a substantial sum in loans and grants from the PWA to finance long-delayed improvements. As pointed out by the Board of Trade, that fact should ease pressure upon the regular budget. No doubt, too, a number of economies could be made without impairing essential municipal service. The plea for consolidation of Washington's three separate recreational agencies points the way toward constructive reduction of expenses.

Thomas Wolfe

Probably the most passionate admirer of Thomas Wolfe would not contend that he was an artist. Certainly, he was no artist in the sense that he was ever the master of his own work. So far from controlling it, he was controlled by it. Like his readers he was swept along in the torrents of his rhetoric.

He wrote, not because he wished to be a writer, but because he had to be one. What he had to say was entirely about himself, but there was so much of it that if some sluice gate of the spirit had ever closed upon the flow the result would have been catastrophe. As it was, the headlong rush of language from him left no opportunity to stop and ask if it had a meaning. One came from such books as "Look Homeward, Angel" and "Of Time and the River," not with any moral of life in the large, but with a succession of impressions at once vivid and disjointed, and with the sense of having shared a profound and irrelevant experience.

The verbal vagaries of Thomas Wolfe were something far different from the studied obscurities of such an artist as Henry James or the attenuated significances of Marcel Proust. If, for instance, James wrote all around a point without ever coming to it, it was because he knew the point to be too subtle and elusive to be approached directly. Nevertheless, the point was there and in the end the persevering reader could find it for himself.

Was there any point—that is to say, any universal moral pattern—into which Thomas Wolfe was attempting to direct his prodigious and intensely personal sensations? Probably the answer is that there was, though he had yet to find it. Whether or not he would have found it, if death had spared him, will never now be known. But if he could have done so he would surely have emerged from the inebriation of rhetoric into the exaltation of genius. That is the saddest thing about his sadly premature death.

The Weather Man

Despite the prominent position he occupied, probably few Americans outside aviation circles and the members of his own profession knew the name of Dr. Willis R. Gregg, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, who died in Chicago on Wednesday. And yet his activities touched the lives and welfare of large numbers intimately and continuously.

"People are always talking about the weather," said Mark Twain, "but nobody ever does anything about it." That has never been wholly true. The very fact that the human race, as far back as there is any record of it, has always regarded clothing and shelter as necessities proves that for many hundreds of centuries something has been done about the weather. And through the United States Weather Bureau a good deal more is now being done.

The activities of this governmental agency are based on the tried and true dictum that to be forewarned is to be forearmed. As meteorological science has developed, weather predictions have become increasingly more accurate and it may be possible some day to forecast weather long periods ahead.

Without such information as the Weather Bureau makes available, commercial aviation never would have made the strides it has and a vast number of other activities would continue to be at the mercy of nature. In the Government service since 1915, Dr. Gregg was a pioneer in weather reporting for fliers and as chief of the bureau since 1934 he was responsible for the expansion and perfection of that invaluable service.

But the impersonality of weather somehow has always managed to cling to those, like Dr. Gregg, whose business it is to discover its secrets.

A 40-Cent Minimum

The action of members of the National Battery Manufacturers Association in voting to pay a minimum wage of 40 cents per hour has aroused hopes that other industries with relatively high wage scales will follow their example. From the administrative viewpoint it would be a great help if industries with wage scales at or above the statutory maximum which may be decreed under the new wage-hour law would voluntarily set a floor under wage rates.

It will be necessary for the storage battery industry to follow the regular procedure of appointing an advisory committee and awaiting the administrator's decree. Nevertheless, with a large majority of the industry's employers pledged to immediate acceptance of the statutory maximum rates of pay, the procedure will be quite simple. The wage-hour administrator and his assistants will, therefore, have more time to devote to the problems of industries in which wages are substandard.

In addition to the administrative advantages of speedy disposition of wage-scale problems, employers in the more highly paid industries will often find it advantageous to protect themselves against the competitive inroads of a "chiseling" minority who pay less than the recognized standard rates. Thus a law designed primarily to help raise standards of hours and wages for industrial workers is likewise capable of providing protection for certain classes of employers. They are the ones who can and will pay liberal wages, if assured that their concessions will not be an inducement for wage undercutting by weaker and less scrupulous rivals.

Man Of The Hour?

Some newspapers recently carried an item which, if it means what it seems to mean, would relegate the primary elections, the Hines mistrial and even the European war scare to the relative status of trivialities. Dr. Norbert Wiener, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has reported a mathematical discovery "which brings utter confusion for the first time under the control of man." The discovery, it seems, is some new kind of calculus.

You can see the implications of the thing for yourself. The more you think about them the vaster they become. The big question is where to begin. One's first thought, of course, is that Dr. Wiener is the very man to straighten out Washington's traffic problem. And yet before he could really get to work on it we are pretty sure that Secretary Morgenthau would be begging him to put it aside in favor of the more urgent chaos of the national debt. But no sooner could Mr. Morgenthau get Dr. Wiener installed in the Treasury than the State Department would be on the wire begging him to please come over at once to tackle the European mess.

But we dare say that Dr. Wiener would not reach the sidewalk before Secretary Wallace would have him by the buttonhole of the right lapel, eloquently pleading with him to drop everything for the crop surplus problem. But how could Secretary Wallace prevail against the eleven Insterstate Commerce Commissioners, who by this time would be pulling Dr. Wiener by the left arm, beseeching him to tell them what to do about the railroads?

The only possible answer would be for the President to constitute Dr. Wiener a one-man brain trust and for Mr. Hopkins to set all the WPA forces in the country to work manufacturing and sharpening lead pencils.

Michelson Vs. Waltman

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The two articles printed side by side in The Post of September 11, by Charles Michelson and Franklyn Waltman, expound these writers' interpretations of politics and party issues. The former has lucidly set forth through a concise and factual analysis how the Democratic trend is currently affecting New Deal strategy, but the latter's plea for Republican support is sadly wanting in realism.

Mr. Waltman assumes that, briefly, "the issues against the New Deal today are the same as they were in 1936." Even if the narrowness of such a static platform be conceded, his arguments would not feed, clothe and house the unemployed for whom he professes so much concern. In order to tempt them to give up the lean bird in the hand for two fat ones in the plentiful Republican bush, Mr. Waltman trots out economic concepts that are as dubious as the Malthusian doctrine.

Admittedly the situation regarding the budget is bad; nevertheless last week the Secretary of the Treasury sold $700,000,000 worth of Government paper within 24 hours! Ergo, our national credit has not suffered the dark eclipse predicted by Messrs. Hamilton, Frank and Hoover.

It is painfully true that the New Deal "has been guilty of frightful waste and extravagance," and many patriotic Democrats are worried by the Administration's inefficient management; however, the long-range savings made in the country's natural resources probably more than offset the unbalanced condition between Federal income and expenditures. It might not be amiss to mention that under some Republican administrations there had been a colossal loss of potential wealth through failure to curb the destruction wrought by nature and private enterprise.

The economic orientation of the New Deal seems to be theoretically sound; it is based not only upon increasing productive capacity but also raising consumption or purchasing power. Solely by a greater spread in mass income can industrial production hope to expand and unemployment contract.

Europe Vs. America

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter from "A European" was so thoroughly typical of the European viewpoint that I would like to express a typical American viewpoint.

About the turn of the century, when the U. S. licked a European country and showed Europe that the Western Hemisphere intended to be free, the Europeans began to realize that this is no longer a country of wild Indians and stage coaches. When the Europeans discovered that Americans were civilized enough to be permitted out of the United States, and that American industry had put some money in the pockets of some of the Americans, then the Europeans went hog wild over bringing our moneyed people over there to be separated from their money. The European tourist business became a swell racket (for the Europeans). It was practically a one-way business financially.

If the Americans didn't come over as tourists and shell out fast enough, then Europe shipped over some broken down titles to be married into our wealthy families and speed up the money flow to Europe. Then their hotbed of politics, persecution and putrefaction blew up in 1914 and they discovered that their soft old uncle across the ocean could be induced to shell out and hock his shirt for them with the right sort of sentimental approach. So we had the hysterical war propaganda that dragged us into their mess.

When soft-hearted Uncle (who was later on so lovingly nicknamed "Shylock") had borrowed all he could and bared his own breast to Europe's bombs, bayonets and barbed wire in order to "make them safe for democracy," Europeans discovered another swell racket. A lot of highbrow stuffed shirts learned how easily they could borrow the fare to the U. S., look around for a week or so, lecture us on how to run the country, and return to their own country with a fortune. After all this evidence of America's idealism, openheartedness and desire for friendship, they give a "well known shrug of shoulders" as their opinion of Americans.

"A European" has a heluva lot of nerve to condemn us for trying to run our own affairs in our own way. As far as our knowing nothing of moral values, being a rotten friend to Europe, and being headed for "the same end of all materialists decay" is concerned, what does Europe know about moral values and friendship? A record since 1865 of death to 55 European leaders and over 350 others by assassination does not speak highly for European's knowledge of moral values and friendship.

As far as our trade agreements are concerned, we feel that they are the best way to promote peace; and as far as our "hated gold" is concerned, Europe is burning up with the itch to get that "hated gold" into its possession. If there is to be any real hope of world peace, it will be due entirely to the fact that our President is too smart to be roped into financing another one of Europe's habitual sprees of insanity.

I fully agree like so many other Americans with the "Pegler Policy." "To hell with them" is the right approach. If we tend to our own knitting and make friends with our own neighbors in the Western Hemisphere who all have something in common, then Europe may come to her senses without involving our "hated gold" and the precious blood of our young idealists who know nothing of "moral values." Does "A European" greet with his "well known shrug of shoulders" the fact that our youngsters of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade threw away their lives in a typical European imbroglio in order to "prove to be a rotten friend of Europe?"

Let's petition Secretary Hull to appoint Mr. Pegler as his special assistant to promote a policy of "Good Neighbor to the Americans and to Hell with Europe" and start a "Pegler for President" boom. Long live the "Johnson act" and don't weaken it. We don't want any more phony European bonds in trade for our "hated gold" either.

HUNDRED PERCENT AMERICAN.

Washington, Sept. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter in this morning's Post, signed European, avers that Americans have no sense of moral values; chides us for remaining out of the League of Nations, which he states we did for commercial reasons, and denounces our motives in pushing reciprocal trade agreements.

To begin with, no nation has a corner on the sense of moral values, but it ill behooves the citizen of any country which has practically repudiated its war debts to sneer at the United States.

Second, many Americans will agree with "European" that the United States failed the world and repudiated an obligation when it stayed out of the League of Nations. But our motive in staying out was not to gain later commercial advantages, but because the people of this country may have foreseen that any future efforts on our part to assist the international situation would have the same results as our last effort, namely the expense would be borne by us and we would incur the contempt of "European." His letter makes our decision to stay out look better than it ever has before.

Third, the reciprocal trade agreements of Secretary Hull are not wholly selfish, but are per se a recognition of the fact that international trade is not a one-way street. And we may suppose that any selfish motives we may have harbored in making the agreements countered by equally selfish motives of foreign countries, including "European's" own country.

"European" reflects the persistent blind spot that foreign countries have when considering the United States. It reflects their common belief that it is more blessed to receive than to give. Anyone who has read current history since the World War, or who has traveled in a foreign country, knows that in a comparison of national appreciations of moral values, the United States will not suffer.

Or, as Westbrook Pegler says, to "European's" annoyance, "To Hell with them."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS ROOTER.

Chevy Chase, Md., Sept. 10.

The 1938 Jitters

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Time and again, President Roosevelt, while discussing the state of the Nation, constantly makes us all conscious of the very uneven distribution of our national income by his constant references to the one-third of the Nation that are referred to as ill-housed, ill-clad and ill-nourished.

Nevertheless, the National Resources Committee makes a startling statement to the general public. This new novel contains 80,000 words—and more pages than I'd care to dog-ear. But does document Roosevelt's challenge to show what it actually means in dollars and cents. One-third of all American families, the committee finds, had incomes of less than $780 in the years 1935-36. That's startling news in any WPA man's language.

What will this report mean to the man in the streets? I am afraid to speak his language. However, we do maintain monopolies in anything and everything but the dead Blue Eagle.

With war to worry about, so many complicated investigations with industries, reports from the National Economic Committee, National Resources Committee, this new idea of hoarding gold and silver in underground vaults, the present move of President Roosevelt's purging process, and all the other ills and pains in the pit of my stomach, etc., make me a jitterburg, and make me feel as though something is up somebody's sleeve. What do you think?

"The President's Son"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No doubt many readers of The Post feel as Mr. Benjamin Stickney, jr., about the fine article, "The President's Son." It gives one a higher regard for this daily paper.

We are grateful to the editor for injecting this kind, Christian note, that calls for great admiration.

The Post Impressionist

IN SEPTEMBER the elderberry and pokeberry bushes are black with clusters of ripe fruit, and here and there a persimmon (the trees are covered with them) gives a hint of what they will be like when Sweetener Jack Frost has turned his little trick; heavy trucks filled with tomatoes churn up the dust on country roads on their way to the canning factories and farmers carefully watch the tobacco ripening in their barns. Nature lovers begin to watch for the advance guards of ducks, geese and swans on their way South, fishermen are busy with rod and line and net, and oystermen are hardening themselves for a busy winter; skates disturb the face of the water as they chase the rock and blue fish that chase the minnows and excite the sportsman; hardheads begin to have a slight taste of iodine, but trout and perch, and rock and blue fish remain sweet; late roses still bloom and the cantaloupe patch in the garden has a rich, ripe odor; oak and sumac prepare for their annual orgy of color with a few preliminary bouts of red and yellow; crickets chirp and the locusts tell of frost a-coming—Stretch!

In September every field's a slice of bread that's buttered with the yellow goldenrod—

In September the air is filled with pleasing harvest odors; dawn and sunset have added glories; fruit has a joyous tang; and cheerful sounds are all around—

And in September you'll find the countryside dotted with men and women with their faces buried in handkerchiefs; their eyes so red and weepy they can't see; their noses so red and swollen they can't smell; their respiratory organs so compounded of antithetical phlegm and fury and their gustatory nerves so jaded that they can't taste; and their ears closed to melody.

It is one of Nature's little jokes.

And, aiding and abetting Nature, Demosthenes McGinnis walked into the postoffice with a huge bunch of goldenrod and said to Casual Smith, "Here, Casual, let me introduce you to the greatest manufacturer of red-eye in the United States."

Casual emerged from his handkerchief long enough to remark, "You're behind the times, Mac. While goldenrod hasn't a clean bill of health (nothing has!) it is probably the least harmful of the wayside weeds. Ragweed's the wickedest explorer and with milkweed it does its best to curdle the milk of human kindness. But the goldenrod doesn't chase its victim; it stays at home to be wooed by moth and bee."

"Spare the goldenrod and spoil a childish fancy," murmured Capt. Ebenezer Longbow.

"I could give you chapter and verse for it," said Casual Smith, "but I am much too busy."

"Blowing a horn in a ragweed band," supplemented Capt. Longbow.

"Casual has my sympathy," said Parson Bob. "Hay fever is a terrible affliction; and the worst part of it, I think, is the asthma with which it frequently winds up."

"Asthma," said Casual Smith, unexpectedly, "has given me many happy moments."

"Which," said D. McGinnis, "is either damn nonsense or the text for a sermon."

"Sounds more like a wheeze," said Capt. Longbow.

"Know anything about the 'Three O'Clock in the Morning Blues'?" demanded Casual Smith.

"Is it a piece of music?" asked Parson Bob.

"No. It is a state of mind. You wake up with the realization that the answer to the age-old question, 'What's the use of anything?' is the inevitable 'Nothing!' Life is a fizzle. My life; your life; everybody's life. The blues may be personal or general; with or without reason; but the spasm is always acute. You realize, as at no other time, that everything alive kills something else to keep alive; feeds on something alive to keep alive. And since nothing but a few billion germs, microbes, viruses, combine to kill a man for food the men obligingly combine to kill each other. That's one phase.

"Then another: Democracy's dead and awaiting burial. War is inevitable. Before war can be waged power must be centralized. Centralized power means dictatorship. After the war dictatorship remains. After civilization is dead another civilization may be born and eventually, another democracy. Things just going round and round and coming out nowhere. Nothing in the cosmos but a lot of foolish chatter, and it really doesn't matter, doesn't matter, doesn't matter. Moreover you know that the dull ache in your mouth means another dentist bill and the barn already needs another coat of whitewash.

"Then along comes asthma and you begin to fight for breath. The fate of the world suddenly becomes unimportant. Just to breathe is the one thing that matters; one desideratum, the recovery of respiratory rhythm. So into your den you go and close the door and windows and burn the stuff that gives you ease and cough and choke and presently peace descends upon you and you are able to light your pipe and smoke. And, sitting by the window, your pipe going nicely, you look out over the water and see the dawn break.

"Sure the world's all right," said Capt. Longbow. "Casual Smith's still able to talk."

Losing on a Foul

THE MISTRIAL in the Jimmy Hines case before Judge Pecora puts me in mind of the night that Harry Wills was tossed out of the ring and definitely out of the running for the heavyweight championship of the world by a decision of foul in his fight with Jack Sharkey.

Wills, in heavyweight pugilism, like Prosecutor Tom Dewey in New York local and State politics, was a nuisance and a menace. Nobody quite knew how great a menace he was, because he had been kept out of important fights by Tex Rickard's gentlemen's agreement with himself that it wouldn't do the boxing game any good to have a colored man fight a white man for the heavyweight championship of the world. Finally, however, he was given a fight with Sharkey, a new boy at the time, and was disqualified for hitting while holding—a technical foul, but common practice in the ring all over the United States.

SOME REFEREES and judges do make a solemn pretense of penalizing in their little score sheets a fighter who hits while holding, but most of them have favored the theory that when a man gets up in the ring to fight, especially for the prices which fighters received in those days, he ought to protect himself against minor impositions.

The disqualification of Wills eliminated him from the logical contendership or runnerupcy, as the No. 2 ranking among the heavyweights was known at the time. Ferd Pecora's decision, throwing Tom Dewey out of the ring, so to speak, may not have the same effect on his future, for he is young and still coming on, whereas Wills was beyond his prime and just hanging around. But, certainly, the Democratic machine of New York City and State, and particularly Tammany Hall, of which Ferd Pecora has long been a member, will feel no regret that the Republicans' most promising young aspirant to the governorship lost his most important fight on a highly technical foul which could have been evened up in the scoring.

LAWYERS OFTEN are allowed to get away with the sort of foul for which Ferd Pecora tossed Dewey out. In pugilism, Harry Greb, among others, and even Wills himself in his less important fights, had been allowed to hold and hit without question.

It is almost impossible for any human being to go through any ordinary day's conduct without committing a technical violation of some ordinance or the spirit of some law and, similarly, if a judge should sit back, laying for a chance to call a foul on an attorney, especially in a complex trial lasting a month and more, the chance would be bound to come. No case ever would go to the jury.

Jimmy Hines, the defendant, a Tammany district leader, is one of those standardized metropolitan honest Johns, of a type familiar in the political underworld circles of all our big cities. His conviction and imprisonment on a charge of protecting the policy racket through his political influence would have been widely deplored among that element who regard personal piety, chastity and boastful open-handedness as coverage for all civic erimes.

• • • •

THIS TRIAL contained the elements of a fight for the logical contendership or runnerupcy for the office of Governor of New York, and the Republican boy, by a very fastidious application of the rules, was given that which in pugilism is known as the old yo-heave, to the great political detriment of himself and his party. The political consideration is not just something that exists only in my imagination, for it was mentioned by counsel for the defense.

Under the rules of the New York Prizefight Commission a fighter could be disqualified for default or foul should he appear in the ring wearing white trunks or should one of his seconds appear in a sweater having a pocket in it, but the customers would consider that such an offense could have no true bearing on the merits of the contest and, in their resentment against being denied a thorough fight to a decisive result, considering all the expense to themselves, would be likely to wreck the joint. The people of New York, in an analogous situation, have shown more restraint. They have not undertaken to wreck the edifice of justice, but the engineers had better look for cracks around the foundation.

Current Events Page

For a considerable period The Washington Post has conducted this page as a medium to give the reader "the story back of the news"—intelligent, informative comment on current events of major interest.

With the passage of time outstanding features have been added. As a result The Post feels, with pardonable pride, that this page today offers to its readers a most distinguished list of contributors.

Thus the reader finds Walter Lippmann, Dorothy Thompson, Westbrook Pegler, Ernest Lindley, Mark Sullivan, Barnet Nover and Europax as regular commentators and a brilliant group of occasional contributors with articles on subjects supplementing the important news of the day. And as a fillip to the more serious matter there are the humorous offerings of H. I. Phillips and Ed Reed. The result, we believe, is thought-provoking and informative. With interest in world events at white heat, and our domestic affairs offering problems that are being discussed with animation at every dinner table, on every street corner, we can recommend this page daily as a mirror of best thought on current events.

The Court In A Crisis

By Kirke L. Simpson

Associated Press Staff Writer.

It Meets Monday, An 8-Man Bench

An eight-man Supreme Bench is preparing to assemble Monday, October 3, without any indication as to when President Roosevelt will make a nomination to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Cardozo.

In both court and political circles there is a consensus that no urgent reason exists for such a nomination before election, or even before the Senate meets in January, barring an unpredictable special session to meet a war emergency in Europe. Traditions of the high bench, although not always observed in the past, are against participation in court proceedings by any member-designate until his nomination has been confirmed by the Senate.

Little doubt is expressed here that any man or woman of a caliber and standing either at the bar, on the bench or in public estimation to warrant consideration for the Cardozo vacancy would follow that tradition. That belief is reinforced by the fact that no major case involving a constitutional ruling on New Deal legislation is apt to reach the point of either argument or decision at the coming term before the Senate has had opportunity to consider a Supreme Court nomination. Such New Deal cases as are now docketed or in sight for the court next term bear on points of administrative procedure, not on basic construction of the Constitution.

Prominent Administration men in Congress take the attitude, according to their friends, that there is no need to stir up possible controversy now by making the appointment. Seasoned onlookers here entertain little doubt, in view of the part the Supreme Court issued played in bringing the struggle between the President and his Democratic opponents to a head, that the next Roosevelt appointee to the high bench is in for even more exacting Senate scrutiny than Justices Black and Reed underwent.

It is considered hardly less certain that Mr. Roosevelt's choice will fall on a confirmed "liberal," under his definition of that term, and that the selection will invite opposition from among those Senate Democrats he classes as conservative.

Among other possible reasons cited as tending to delay a choice by the President is the possibility that Democratic casualties in the November elections might make available additional high-court timber. Defeat of any ardent New Deal Senator or Governor for re-election, provided his legal or other qualifications were suitable, would almost certainly start activity among his friends for his elevation to the Supreme Court. Such a Senator, under the traditional "courtesy" habits of the Senate, would be better placed to hope for prompt confirmation than an outsider. Senators, either as incumbent or as "lame ducks," rarely have been seriously challenged for Sentae approval for any post to which a President named them.

There is speculation also as to whether Mr. Roosevelt might not go outside the Democratic Party for his next nomination to the court. It is recalled that he recently said that as between a liberal Republican and a conservative Democrat running for Congress, he would have no objection to the election of the Republican.

As a step in the Roosevelt effort to bid across party lines for liberal support of the New Deal, nomination of a Republican liberal or a progressive might, some observers believe, be a strategic move.

Federal Tax Plan Sought to Spur Profit-Sharing

By the Associated Press.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, disclosed yesterday that Treasury experts and aides of a special Senate committee were trying to devise tax alterations which would encourage development of industrial profit-sharing.

Before making any recommendation to Congress, Herring's committee intends to hold hearings about December 1. It will question Henry Ford, Alfred P. Sloan and other big industrialists.

Questionnaires sent out by the committee, Herring said, have shown that about 165 companies share profits with workers.

"If we can find a profit sharing plan that would work in 60 or 70 per cent of the Nation's plants," he said, "we hope to recommend a compensatory tax by the Federal Government to encourage it.

'Flying Priest' Will Visit D. C.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Rev. Paul Schulte, famous "flying priest," arrived today from a 17,000-mile flight on life-saving missions in the Arctic Circle and will go to Washington, D. C.

Piloting his own monoplane, Father Schulte landed at the Pan American station at Port Washington, Long Island, accompanied by the son of the late Anton Lang, the "Christus" of the Oberammergau Passion plays.

He planned to visit Philadelphia and Baltimore too.

Little Business Group Demands Labor Law Change

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16 (AP).—A "declaration of principles," including demands for tax revision and amendment of the Wagner labor act, was adopted today by the National Small Business Men's Association at the final session of its first convention.

The objectives, recommended by the resolutions committee, included demands that:

Government retire from business competition with the citizen.

Taxes be levied for revenue only.

Congress repeal all laws delegating its power.

The resolutions affirmed:

Belief in social security, but insistence of a "pay-as-you-go policy."

Belief in the Wagner labor relations act, but urged amendment of the act to provide equal rights for employer and employe.

Belief in the constitutional guaranty of free speech, with specific reference to the press and radio.

Plumbers' Union Names D. C. Man National Chief

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Atlantic City, Sept. 16.—John Coefield, of Washington, was re-elected president here today of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada, a 58-year-old A. F. L. union witht 53,000 members. He is fourth vice president of the A. F. L.

Closing their twenty-third convention, the delegates also re-elected Thomas E. Burke, of Washington, secretary-treasurer, and Frank J. Kennedy, of Chicago, assistant secretady. They created a new post of assistant to the president and elected George Masterson, Chicago, to fill it.

The contention voted a request that the prevailing wage be stipulated in all Federal Housing Administration projects. Other resolutions called for extending social security to workers whom it does not now cover, particularly in Federal Government service.

Despite opposition from New York delegates, local unions were voted the right to organize apprentices and limit their numbers.

'Tis Sad Story! It Involves Demise Of Straw Hats

The lid's off!

And so with the advent of Sept. 16, another generation of straw hats yesterday ended a summer of service shading the pates of Washingtonians from the sun's rays. But for all their meritorious service, the majority, from the high-priced panama to the lowly stiffor, found a smug spot in the trash can.

As for the rest, they go into some closet until the next straw season—unless, of course, little Junior finds need of a football or hoop.

Central Library Marks National Dog Week

'No' Senators Exalted

By Mark Sullivan

Popular Verdict Against Roosevelt

THE NINE "No" Senators have now all been renominated. The "No" Senators are the Democratic Senators who opposed President Roosevelt's Court measure and who came up in primaries this year.

The "No" Senators have all been renominated. They have been more than renominated. They have been exalted. They have won by majorities which, in the aggregate, are, I think, unprecedented. (I write on the basis of figures from informal newspaper returns.)

In Georgia Senator George had almost 2 votes to his New Deal opponent's 1. Indeed, the picture in Georgia is even more extreme. There were three candidates. Two, Senator George and Mr. Talmadge, were strongly anti-New Deal. The sum of their votes was about 242,000. The other candidate, Mr. Camp, was New Deal, personally indorsed by President Roosevelt speaking on Georgia soil. This New Deal candidate got roughly 80,000 votes. That is, the New Deal candidate got only 1 vote as against 3 for the anti-New Deal candidates combined.

ELSEWHERE the majorities for the "No" Senators have been even more overwhelming. In Connecticut "No" Senator Lonergan, in a State convention, had 953½ votes to his opponent's 106½—about 9 to 1. In Maryland, "No" Senator Tydings had about 3 votes to his New Deal opponent's 2.

In Missouri "No" Senator Clark had about 4 votes to his leading opponent's 1 and more than 3 votes to 1 for all his opponents combined. In the Nevada primary "No" Senator McCarran had about 3 votes to 1 for his New Deal opponent. In Colorado, in a State convention, "No" Senator Adams had more than 9 votes to his opponent's 1. In Indiana, in a State convention, after "No" Senator Van Nuys had been publicly sentenced to excommunication, his opponents were obliged to recant, and he was renominated unanimously. In Iowa, Senator Gillette got almost twice as many votes as his New Deal opponent.

In all nine of the States where these contests took place, with one exception, the victories of the "No" Senators were overwhelming. Only in one State could the "No" Senator's victory be called merely normal—in South Carolina, Senator Smith had about 11 votes to his opponent's 9.

IF ALL THESE returns in all the States were combined and looked upon as an aggregate, they would show a verdict adverse to Mr. Roosevelt's Court proposal greater, I think, than any popular verdict even given on any similar issue. The issue in this case was not, of course, the New Deal as a whole. The issue was a combination of two—the President's Court proposal and the right and duty of Senators to vote their convictions as against a demand by the President that they vote with him.

To see the striking quality of this outcome, turn back to August 30 of last year, soon after Mr. Roosevelt's Court proposal had been rejected in the Senate. At that time, Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, original herald of the policy of reprisal against "No" Senators, proclaimed that every such Senator was an ingrate to the President, a traitor to the party; every one of them must be punished by expulsion, excommunication, extinction, extirpation, extermination—and other words to that effect.

Turn back also to that journey across the country which President Roosevelt took in September last year, the journey that was really the quiet beginning of what later was publicly carried out as the policy of purge. On that journey, Mr. Roosevelt acted only by indirection. As he went from State to State he, in the sight of the voters, conspicuously gave the cold shoulder to Senators who had opposed his Court measure, conspicuously beamed on Senators who had supported it. At that time, no doubt, he assumed that this tacit attitude would be a sufficient hint to the country. By a year later, he was to find out that tacit hint was not enough. He made his purge open, public, and conspicuous. And now he finds that everything he could do was not enough.

TURN BACK ALSO to the months in which the Court measure was before Congress. During that period it was asserted by the President's friends that the country was with him, that the "No" Senators were acting in defiance of majority sentiment, that if the Court measure were to go before the country in a referendum the measure would be indorsed, the President upheld. Some of the opponents of the Court measure believed this, and suggested compromise, such as letting the President have two additional justices of the Supreme Court instead of the six the President asked. Mr. Roosevelt, believing more strongly than anyone else that the country was with him, rejected all compromise.

Consider that, and then consider that the present majorities in favor of the "No" Senators—carrying implicitly rejection of the Court measure—are in Democratic primaries only. If these primaries were general elections with everybody voting, does any one doubt that substantially every Republican vote would be added to the majority which Democratic voters gave?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Big Issue

This planet's in a frightful mess,
Disaster looms on every side,
All mankind winces in distress,
As threats are bellowed far and wide;
Old Mars once more is on a spree
As leaders great portray the clown.
Yet, this one issue bothers me—
Will wifey wear hers up or down?

II.

Along the Rhine the troops are massed,
As conflict seems a certain bet;
No slight excuse for war is passed
Wherever two hotheads are met;
Each day is heard the warlike note
That leaves the taste so dark and blown . . .
Still, only one thing gets my goat—
Will sister wear hers up or down?

III.

The French are ready for the fray,
On many borders rifles gleam;
One does not know from day to day
What is the true fact and the dream;
Great war fleets to maneuvers go,
The threats and counter-threats are hot . . .
But this alone I want to know:
Will mother wear hers up or not?

IV.

The Communist sleeps 'neath our bed,
So is the charge that's widely heard;
I hear that Moscow agents spread
Deep plots while giving us "the bird";
The country plunges into debt,
There's talk of threatened bankruptcy . . .
But this is what I'd know, my pet—
What will her style of hairdress be?

V.

The Mexicans now thumb their nose
Quite gleefully at Uncle Sam;
On all sides of us trouble grows,
As Mars yelps to the peaceful, "Scram!"
The state of industry is bad,
Recovery seems very slow . . .
Yet only this concerns me, lad,
Will Nellie wear it high or low?

VI.

Let nations go nerts if they will,
Let kingdoms crash, and let 'em fall;
Let cannon shake the distant hill
And tanks crash through the fence and wall;
I do not seek the bloody fray,
I do not wish for any fight,

Herring for Amending Labor Relations Act

By the Associated Press.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, said yesterday the next Congress should amend the national labor relations act "to correct things that are unjust to employer and employe."

"The employer has no chance to make a case under the act as it stands. The first knowledge he has of a case is when some examiner for the board comes in and says, 'Put this man back to work.' The act should be amended to provide a full, fair and impartial hearing for both sides."

Two Europes

There are two Europes today. There is the Europe of cathedrals, museums, palaces; of parades and concerts; of cafe life and picnics; of marching millions who seem to be devoted fanatically to one man and his cause. That is the Europe which you will see, enjoy.

There is another Europe—a Europe of brutality and force; a Europe of terror in the hearts of men. It is a Europe which only finds expression in homes, where men are sometimes not afraid to speak. This Europe is hard to see; it is not on view for tourists. But the tourist would do well to remember that it exists. Its existence may help explain events which will be occurring in the days yet to come.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

YOUNG, BUT not the least affected by his job as Governor of the Virgin Islands is LAWRENCE W. CRAMER. He was giving an interview here yesterday when the door of his private office opened off the corridor and two young men walked in. Not knowing the Governor, they asked if he was "Mr. Brown" and if not, where was "Mr. Brown?" The Governor didn't shoo them out to his ante-room, with a fractious word to see his secretary. "I'll go and see," he said; and interrupting the interview he searched several adjoining offices for "Mr. Brown," much as an office boy would do. Wish they were all that way!

• • • •

SPEAKING OF those involved corridors in the Government's buildings, the only master pathfinders who trod them are the Indians who work for the Office of Indian Affairs. A wanderer in the mazes, lost long, chanced upon one of those trusty Mohawks, or Oneidas, or Sioux, whichever he was. "Go to the first floor; you're now on the sixth; then go to the first wing and your man will be in the second door on the left of the corridor," he said without hesitation.

• • • •

IF YOU hear the Office of Indian Affairs workers talking of their "Navy" they mean the Boxer and the North Star, stout craft that carry supplies to the Alaskan personnel.

The most imaginative resolution to emanate from the A. F. G. E.'s Chicago convention is the one demanding that civil service select the seamen to man all Government-owned vessels. You will recall that civil service people can't strike. . . .

NOW THAT they've picked all the beauty queens and Miss Interior, there comes to light a project wherein "Miss Bicyclist" will be chosen. The half-mile sprint race will be held October 16 on the Ellipse road, and all girls employed by Federal agencies will be eligible, we learn from C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of parks.

IT IS to think how fortunate (in so many respects) are Uncle Sam's employes. The thought occurs in contemplating the retirement of KIRK HOLMES, civilian assistant to the paymaster general, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department, who retires on November 1 after 45 years' of faithful duty. Now, when life is richest for him, he takes his leave, knowing he has served well and will have the material means, through retirement benefits, to face the future.

And with his leave-taking was the satisfaction of commendation from Rear Admiral Charles Conard, paymaster general, who wrote Holmes:

"Service such as yours merits praise. Now that retirement brings your labors to a close, the good wishes of all your friends and associates in the Navy Department are combined to say, 'God bless you and bring you happiness for many years to come.'"

ONE OF the most interesting half hours recently spent was in the Archives among those gorgeous, magnificent, gaudy, garish, gold-embroidered treaties which they keep in a closely guarded room. Visitors, besides being known, have to register their names. If we remember correctly, it is a windowless room that heightens the feeling for all the cramped, stuffy rhetoric on pieces of paper that are the futile treaties.

A PARADOX in the Federal scene is the genuine interest that Veterans' Administrator, GEN. FRANK T. HINES, takes in the welfare of his employes and the terrific number of complaints that arise within his jurisdiction.

Without compulsion, he has recommended for civil service status some 12,000 employes in veterans hospitals and facilities; from his own personal good will he wrote a letter to the A. F. G. E. Chicago convention expressing his concern for employes with a hope that conditions will improve.

Simultaneously, comes a blast from the U. F. W. A. to effect that "Last year the Veterans' Administration saved $9,345,000" (and) "did you get a salary increase last year?" The question was asked for negative answer.

We leave the riddle unanswered.

SHISH-KEBAB: yesterday they confounded our hour in the Commerce Building with the talk of it; they spoke of it with moistened lips. Prague Restores Order

THE DANGER which Czechoslovakia faces is a three-fold one. A beleaguered nation, she is threatened by mutiny from within, invasion from without and the possibility that should the latter occur she will be deserted by those she expects to come to her assistance.

The external danger is a deadly serious one. In the minds of the cool-headed statesmen at Prague it was so real during the week-end of May 20-21 that they found it necessary to mobilize the army to resist the threatened invasion. It is so real today that Neville Chamberlain found it advisable to rush to Berchtesgaden by plane to talk over the situation with Adolf Hitler.

During the past week, however, the danger from without, grave as it is, was overshadowed by the danger from within.

IMMEDIATELY after Hitler's inflammatory speech of Monday, uprisings broke out in many parts of the Sudeten area. They bore a startling resemblance to the uprisings which occurred in Austria between the time Chancellor Schuschnigg made known his plan for a plebiscite and the actual beginning of Anschluss.

It is now apparent that in taking to the warpath the followers of Henlein did not expect to be left unsupported by the nation whose dictator had extended over them the mantle of his protection. It is also apparent that had this revolt got out of hand, Czechoslovakia's capacity to resist invasion would have been substantially reduced, and possibly destroyed altogether.

As it happened, the flare-up in the Sudeten area was not followed by invasion and was quickly put down. For the time being at least, order again obtains in the border regions of Czechoslovakia, even though tensions there remain exceedingly grave. And to prevent further disorders, the Prague authorities have taken a succession of far-reaching measures. They have placed nearly all of the Sudeten area under martial law. They have issued an order for the arrest of Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten Nazi leader, and they have ordered his party dissolved.

THESE DEVELOPMENTS have given the Nazi press an occasion to fan the flames of hostility toward Czechoslovakia. They have also made it very much more difficult for the Prague government to carry out that program of appeasement between Czechs and Germans so eloquently espoused by President Benes in his speech of a week ago. But, they have also reduced the dangers of civil war in Czechoslovakia, temporarily, at least.

This fact is of enormous importance. For as long as Prague's authority and control continue to be exercised effectively in the Sudeten area, that destruction of Czechoslovak independence which Hitler is patiently aiming to bring about can only be achieved from without—that is, by means of a military invasion.

UNTIL NOW the Fuehrer has refrained from setting the German military machine in motion. Perhaps he feels that warlike action against Czechoslovakia is unnecessary; that he can achieve what he is after by the unrelenting threat of war, by driving a wedge between Czechoslovakia and her allies and by encouraging the disruptive forces in that republic to undermine Prague's capacity to resist dissolution.

In any event, while the siege of Czechoslovakia has not been lifted there has thus far been no assault on that citadel of democracy.

That this technique has possibilities of success cannot be gainsaid. Since the Nuremberg speech Chamberlain has gone to Berchtesgaden, the idea of a plebiscite in the Sudeten area to determine whether that region is to go to Germany has gained increased acceptance both in England and France and to the Sudeten German demands for union with the Third Reich there are added the demands of the Magyar and Polish minorities in Czechoslovakia that they be allowed to join Hungary and Poland.

HOWEVER, as long as Czechoslovakia can maintain order within her borders, as this week she has demonstrated her capacity to do, she retains the final decision as to her fate.

The Czechs are realists. They know that Czechoslovakia was permitted to come into being and was given her present borders by the allies not only for historic but also for strategic reasons. These strategic reasons found reflection in the Franco-Czechoslovak treaty of alliance which rested on the presumption that the existence of an independent Czechoslovakia was a necessity for France. That was true in 1919; it was true in the days of the Weimar republic; it is infinitely more true now that France has on her flank the Germany of Adolf Hitler.

IT IS THUS possible for the Prague leaders to discount possible threats by France (none has so far been made) that unless Czechoslovakia meets Hitler's demands in whole or large part, even though that means the loss of the strategically defensible Sudeten border, France will not aid her ally, and neither will Great Britain. It is possible for them to hold to the belief that if Germany attacks their nation and Czechoslovakia resists neither France nor Great Britain will be able to hold aloof.

The time may soon be at hand when Czechoslovakia will be asked, not only by her enemies but also by her erstwhile friends, to chose between war or the destruction of her independence without war. In the opinion of many in England and France it would be far better, should that choice have to be made, for Czechoslovakia to disappear peacefully. But the Czechs may not take so complacent a view of the situation. They may decide to fight. And if they do, the fat will be in the fire for Britain and France as well as for the Czechoslovak republic asserting its inalienable right of self-defense.

Ball and Oakie Shaking Blues At RKO-Keith's

'Affairs of Annabel' Is an Especial Comedy Triumph for Lucille, Kidnaped Actress

"THE AFFAIRS OF ANNABEL." RKO-Radio Pictures' picturization of a screen play by Bert Granet and Paul Yawitz, based on Charles Hoffman's story, starring Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball, supported by Ruth Donnelly, Brodsky Page and Thurston Hall. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

There's a beautiful screwball touch to "The Affairs of Annabel." Not following the pattern of "Boy Meets Girl," it still mirrors the Hollywood psychosis—anything for a headline. As pure velvet it adds large dashes of modern crime and a machine-gun climax. But all's in the clowning spirit. Even the kidnapers donate laughs. Annabel's affairs are all froth and bubbles and it's a pleasant hour or so they'll give you.

When such a person as Jack Oakie turns press agent to a movie queen, it's sure somebody is going to have a lot of headaches. He starts off Lucille Ball with a pretty jail term from which she is to emerge amid the thud of flash bulbs and as the country's Joan of Arc for the week. This is a colossal floperoo. After serving her full term, Lucille emerges from the calaboose amid a deadly calm—no reporters, no camera men, no nothing—except a first-class tantrum a la Lucille.

Then the story really goes into a power dive. Publicity Expert Jack finagles Lucille into taking a job as maid as a good build-up for her next picture. Figure a Hollywood siren being expected to wax floors and cook company dinners—also, the young son of the family gets a terrible crush on her.

Lucille Ball Scores

The goings-on come to a head when a couple of kidnapers crash the home and insist on being given sanctuary. After that, the deluge of fireworks, faints and a fadeout that is, happily, entirely denuded of sentiment. No clinching, but just a D. Duck quack-quack of Mr. Oakie imitating the fury of his girl friend.

To Lucille Ball certainly must go ace honors for great work in this one. Not that she overshadows Jack Oakie, but that she knows just the sort of genially oafish carrying-on to expect from Jack. The little Lucille has a wicked and rare gift of comedy. She isn't pretty, judging prettiness in the convenional way, but she is full of roguery, shows touches of subtlety and true humor. Above all, she's highly individual. There's not another young actress in Hollywood capable of such deft ragging of the Hollywood idea. You'll get all chirked up over her underscored attempt to play the siren to the kidnapers (They tell her she ought to stop reading the movie mags). Also her encounter with her high school admirer is pretty as well as comical. Perhaps one should sum up Lucille by saying that she's as sophisticated as a Peter Arno sketch but also just a bad little girl. It's going to be hard to find parts suited to her contradictory talents, but it should be worth while.

Good Short Subjects

Jack and Lucille completely dominate the picture, with the subsidiary parts well done, but never beginning to compete with the principals.

Current "March of Time" is devoted to the Czechoslovakian crisis and Father Divine. There's some fine photography of Prague, but not a great deal in the way of originality in the Czechoslovak half. Something of the cutting, hard quality one expects from this feature seems to be missing. But the Father Divine sequence has smart, enlightening moments, is up to standard. Peace!

Walt Disney's "Fox Hunt" is a super-Donald Duck, if there ever was one. If you have laughs, prepare to give them to the point of tears as you witness Donald scuttling over the countryside in pursuit of Reynard. There's a new and unnamed character, a coquettish horse, whom we hope Mr. Disney will retain in his cast.

The news reel shows the new jai alai games in New York. It's a great game and should give the hockey players a run for their money this winter.

MARY HARRIS.

Hollywood really "gives" in this big production that essentially celebrates the achievements of Irving Berlin, who has become a legend in his own lifetime. It is not the story of Berlin's life, but of his era, of the times and their spirit in which his melodies were intertwined.

The story rises on San Francisco's Barbary Coast, birthplace of jazz, with guys and gals sporting to the hot rhythms of the new "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Alice Faye is a little singer of the Coast, Tyrone Power a young orchestra leader suddenly infatuated with the new music. Don Ameche a hopeful composer infatuated with the Faye. And Faye is in love with Tyrone. It's one of those merry-go-rounds.

All three rise from the dives of San Francisco to the glitter of Broadway, then in its prime. Comes the World War, disappointment, disillusion. Then a climb to the top again for Don and Tyrone, with Alice Faye slipping away from them both, slipping down into the dregs of the amusement world. Happy ending? Of course. But it's achieved only after great skittering up and down the slides of this world.

Ethel Merman contributes some great zazzeroo singing in her typical manner in the last part of the film. John Carradine tosses in a fine characterization of a cab driver who turns out to be a deus ex machina.

But scattered all the way through the huge and lavish production are those haunting Berlin songs, new and old, all the way from the title song and "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" to "Now It Can Be Told."

'Boys Town' Strikes Fire at Loew's Capitol; Earle Scores With Ben Bernie and 'Valley'

Performance by 'Pee Wee' Standout Among Many Standouts; Barn Dance on Stage

"BOYS TOWN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a scenario by John Meehan and Dore Schary, story by Dore Schary and Eleanore Griffin, starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, supported by Henry Hull, Leslie Fenton, Gene Reynolds, Bobs Watson and others. Produced by John W. Considine, Jr., directed by Norman Taurog. Previewed Wednesday, September 14.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

Discussing a picture that is rigidly an actor's picture, as distinguished from cameramen's pictures, costume designers' pictures, writers' pictures, etc., and in which the stars, Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, give performances which neither has excelled in the past, it may be flirting with anomaly to venture, however meekly, that the Pee Wee of 7-yearlold Bobs Watson makes the deepest impression of all.

Perhaps that is what this reviewer was trying to say in last Thursday's column, after previewing "Boys' Town," but in vain. The lapse of two days has brought the desired perspective. One expects the best of Tracy and Rooney and, getting something to cheer about.

You can hardly have escaped having heard what "Boys' Town" is about. How Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, shrewdly scenting picture possibilities in the institution for wayward and homeless boys established by Father Flanagan, near Omaha, Nebr., some years ago, recognized the dramatic potentialities. How a fictionized story was written and Tracy and Rooney cast in the pivotal parts, the former as Father Flanagan, Mickey as his most worrisome ward.

The chronology is about as follows: A doomed murderer, calling for Father Flanagan before he is to walk "the last mile," gives vent to an emotional outburst on the plight of kids who are practically forced into crime by orphanage, sordid home conditions and other environmental factors. The priest is impressed.

Enter Mickey Rooney

Convincing his bishop of the greater need, Father Flanagan closes his flop house for drifters and, with the financial aid of a pawnbroker, opens a refuge for hapless boys. At first the going is rough but the priest's perseverance, plus the pawnbroker's generosity and increasing pubic sympathy, soon make possible a pretentious expansion program.

Th real fireworks begin when a criminal, bound for prison, asks Father Flanagan to take in his kid brother. That kid brother is Mickey Rooney, a defiant hellion who has to be cut down to size. His ultimate regeneration, hastened by a near-tragedy befalling his pal Pee Wee, and cinched prior to the cimactic march of Father Flanagan and the boys on a gangster hideout, is the concern of the remainder of the gripping narrative.

"Boys Town" is more than an unusual picture, it is a provocative one and, withal, good substantial divertisement. The sermonizing is wholly unobtrusive, never interfering with the action which, except for a lapse here and there, maintains a swift pace.

As Father Flanagan, a priest who not only loves boys but understands them, Tracy was never better. His performance definitely eclipses his "San Francisco" priest, the mechanic of "Test Pilot" and the Portuguese fisherman of "Captains Courageous," brilliant as they were.

Direction Commendable

Strangely enough Mickey Rooney's over-acting, which is not unexpected, comes not in his heavy dramatic scenes but in the earlier sequences attending his novitiate in Boys Town. As the expurgated lad crying over Pee Wee's injuries, pleading with Father Flanagan not to make him tell the truth about his gunshot wound and imploring his comrades to let him talk in the hideout raid, Mickey is an artist who belongs in the front row in any company.

Henry Hull is splendid as the pawnbroker, Leslie Fenton as the doomed murderer in the opening scene, Gene Reynolds, Edward Norris—the entire, cast, in short, is admirably up to all demands. But Bobs Watson as Pee Wee, there's a little take who'll smile his way into a misers heart. Not the picture's loudest scene, but possibly the most impressive, is that in which he puts back the candy.

A big bouquet is due Norman Taurog for a beautiful job of directing and another to the trio responsible for the story and script. "Boys Town" is breaking house records everywhere from New York to Tucson, including Omaha of course, indicating that the public recognizes a fine picture, after all, when one comes along.

With an 18-carat picture, which would have been quite capable of standing alone at the Palace, the Capitol could have been excused had it installed a run-of-mine vaudeville accomplice. To the contrary, however, the National Barn Dance is jolly and diverting.

Certain it is that at yesterday's first show the big theater shook with laughter at Lula Belle's fidgeting and the Hilltoppers, four instrumentalists, practically stopped proceedings. Then there were the two comical dance couples, three girls who sing, Pauline the acrobatic dancer, Scotty the whistler and a master of ceremonies who was himself surprised by the volume of laughter that greeted his pronunciation of "ais-les."

The Capitol, like the Earle, will offer six showings of the feature picture and present the vaudeville program five times today.

Strictly Annabel's Affair

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 16.—Paramount Studio officials were about to send for the riot squad when it discovered that their own orchestra was causing all the trouble. It happened on "St. Louis Blues" set when 400 extras, white and black, demanded more music from Mattie Malneck's seven-piece band. Mattie was Paul Whiteman's chief fidler for 11 years. The band consists of a harp, accordian, guitar, hot trumpet, piano and drummer, who plays on cardboard. It's sweet swing stuff and drove the crowd crazy. They broke chairs and tables—nearly jittered the show boat loose from its moorings. Looked for all the world like a boat being loaded on the Mississippi River, where you could witness the greatest rhythm in this country.

I heard this band first at Frank Lloyd's wedding anniversary party where even the olduns swung to and with it. Comic accordianist De Love gets so hot beating time with his feet that he has to do it in his bare feet when recording because the sound of his shoes drowns out the melody. I advised them not to let the visiting Legionnaires hear it or they won't have a studio left. What a band! Hmm, hmm.

• • • •

Peter Lorre's done it again. Gave his valet, George Daniels, who's been with him a year, a five-year contract with options. And as a bonus for his good work, a Pontiac coupe. I need a job, Peter. Any vacancies? I scrub, bake, sew, cook, wash, misspell, split my infinitives, talk a lot—say nothing.

• • • •

Harry Sherman's just put a blacksmith under contract. As you know, the village smithy went out with chestnuts. But on location of "The Frontiersman," where so many horses are used, they can't expect the actors to shoe their own. When not horsing, smithy doubles as a carpenter.

• • • •

I sat beside Charlie Cook at the circus the other night. He's now with Cecil B. DeMille but for years was with Barnum and Bailey, who's slogan was "The Greatest Show on Earth." Charlie shook his head sadly when he read a banner under the big tent: "Motion Pictures Are Your Greatest Entertainment." Pretty sporting of them to use it.

• • • •

Something pathetic about the passing of the circus, because memories of your childhood go with it. I breakfasted in the cook tent with the performers last week. They're famous for their good food. All eat the same, from owner down to the rustlers. They feed 700 people a day. Breakfast takes care of six crates of eggs, four zinc washtubs of hot cakes and 70 gallons of coffee. Elephants only stow away 180 pounds of hay a day but get 5 extra on holidays.

• • • •

How would you like working with King Cobra, 8½ feet long? Joan Bennett and Freddie March did this in "Trade Winds." Its stand-in was a nonpoisonous Texas snake. The cobra's owner and trainer is Grace Wiley, librarian from Minneapolis, who's made snakes her scientific study, and, believe it or not, owns 60. She even tickles them and they like it. She gets $150 a day for the use of a snake—twice as much as is paid for a human baby. She told me if a cobra gets an elephant above its toenails or on the snout, it's fatal. This particular one came within 6 inches of Joan Bennett's face.

• • • •

Our grownups had better look to their laurels. Twelve-year-old Jane Withers is beating them all by careful planning. Writing, producing, acting, directing and supervising her first full-length epic, called: "Butch Hogan's Revenge," which she's doing on 16mm film. She is using studio sets free, fellow actors and her friends. Incidentally, "Arizona Wild Cat," under the Sol Wurtzel banner, will be her first "A" picture. News to me; I thought all her pictures were.

My favorite World War dancing companion, Capt. John Calder from Utica, N. Y., is swinging me all over town. We started twirling in the old Madison Square Garden in one of Elsie Janis' famous pageants. I'm godmother to his oldest child.

And if Elsie Janis isn't in that American Legion parade September 21 in the Coliseum, we'll really have a riot. Elsie's the most popular girl any army ever adopted.

Nancy Lee is quite upset because the gossips had her married to Boyd King before she got her divorce papers from Ed Willis. There's not even the faint tinkle of wedding bells.

There's a motto on Louis B. Mayer's desk which reads: "When you reach the end of your rope, tie a knot and hang on."

Palace

Using a finetooth comb on "Marie Antoinette," now in its second week at Loew's Palace, one may come up with a chore of uncomfortable acting on the part of Tyrone Power or a few mannerisms of Norma Shearer's that grate slightly by their repetition.

All of which is being specious about a superb achievement, a motion picture that is certain to be up among the front rank of contenders when Academy Award day nears.

Concerning itself with the accession of Marie Antoinette, first seen as a giggling little Hapsburg girl, to the throne of France, and carrying on through her execution by the guillotine, this splendid masterpiece of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents a glittering panorama of the court of King Louis XVI which, for all the liberties that have been taken with history, is overwhelming in its grandeur.

That Miss Shearer, Robert Morley, Joseph Schildkraut, John Barrymore and Gladys George succeed so well in making their characterizations stand out boldly against such a pretentious background is a spontaneous tribute to their ability as actors and actresses.

Robert Benchley's experiences with a newt and the Pete Smith short featuring Max Baer are being held over, along with the feature, but the newsreel is as fresh as an office boy.

Sparkling Vaudeville Bill, Thrill-Packed Film Will Send Kids Back to School Happy

"VALLEY OF THE GIANTS." Warner Bros. production, in technicolor, of a screen play by Seton I. Miller and Michael Fessier, from the novel by Peter B. Kyne, with Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp, Charles Bickford, Jack LeRue and John Litel. Directed by William Keighley. Previewed Tuesday, September 13.

With about 100,000 Washington kids getting ready for school Monday, it seems mighty fit and proper that, as a last fling before submerging themselves in those books, they should have an opportunity to dig equally deep into a stage and screen show such as the Earle has on tap this week.

Not that "Valley of the Giants" and Ben Bernie are exclusively juvenile fare. While Wayne Morris might serve as a boy's idol, the ole maestro is rarely identified with Boy Scout knives (except when Winchellizing) or air that's any fresher than a night club haze. It's simply that both pictures and vaudeville, with their cleanness, freshness and family appeal, seem perfectly timed for this end-of-vacation occasion.

To the Earle stage Bernie brings a unit strong on vocalizing, dancing and instrumentations. The maestro himself supplies the sauce, which would be a batch of those casual and innocuous gags that pour forth in the familiar Bernie drawl. And he sings, too, sings a song about someone with flat feet, with gestures.

What with Ben, Shirley Lloyd and Col. Manny Prager, those tunes about a yellow basket and a mulberry bush also get a call, one at a time, of course. That trio handles the scat duties most capably, while Bobby Gibson stands by the straight crooning tradition in his ballads.

The show stoppers are Harris and Shore, burlesquing the waltz, rumba and adagio, and the equally gifted dance team of Toy and Wing, who'll make you wonder what China's coming to after you've applauded their whirlwind routines.

The lads play a swingy arrangement of Irving Berlin melodies, too. All in all, a grand show.

Good Supporting Cast

The trend in movie making, they say, is toward more action and less talk. "Valley of the Gints" is that sort of a picture.

Placing the bovine Wayne Morris and saucy Claire Trevor in the lead roles and wisely giving them such dependables in support as Alan Hale, Donald Crisp, Frank McHugh and Charles Bickford, Warner's has turned out a lively, colorful job that amply fulfills all advance promises of thrills, spectacle and action. For clean, woodsy entertainment fit for all from kiddies to septuagenarians, "Valley of the Giants" is Grade A with palms.

The picturization of the Kyne novel will be compared with the studio's treatment nearly two years ago of the James Oliver Curwood book, "God's Country and the Woman," but should not suffer therefrom. While George Brent, of course, can give young Morris cards, spades and the little casino as an acting handicap, Claire Trevor need take no back seat to Beverly Roberts, who was the feminine heart interest in the earlier timber epic.

However, that is giving the impression that Mr. Morris and Miss Trevor are the most important things there are in "Valley of the Giants," which isn't so at all. While they carry on most capably and gallantly, the picture is more memorable for the handsome mugging of its giant redwoods, the scene in which Alan Hale runs amok in a saloon and that logtrain wreck.

Extra Shows Today

The story, highly condensed, is about a youthful forest landowner and millman of California, a lumber pirate who goes out from Milwaukee with the intention of grabbing the redwood treasure and a girl whom he hires to grease the skids. Morris is the stalwart woodsman, Charles Bickford the heavy and Miss Trevor the bait, who, as happens in about every fourth picture, falls in love with the guy whose downfall she was sent out to expedite.

Candidates for most exciting scene include that in which Claire and Frank McHugh, her willing but helpless bodyguard, are imprisoned in a caboose that hero Morris brings to a stop on the brink of disaster; dynamiting of the dam; the inevitable fist fight between Morris and Bickford, crashing of a redwood practically in the heroine's lap and Alan Hale's priceless rampage in the gambling hall.

Hale, it may be recalled, was half the fun in "God's Country and the Woman." El Brendel and Herbert Rawlinson are other repeaters but they have little to do.

It seems the studio may have had some difficulty arriving at a satisfactory ending. Bickford's last reel reform is unconvincing but, worse, it is a real pity that someone decided Hale should walk after him, ax in hand, with Morris making him come back and hand over the instrument. The implication slightly sours the sympathetic Hale role. Anyway, that Paul Bunyan reincarnate wouldn't have required any ax.

There will be six showings of the picture and five stage shows today, four each tomorrow. G. G. G.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 16.

ALF LANDON: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., this week explained why he named his new son Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d—after having declared that, from his own experiences, this would be unwise. A number of letter writers influenced his decision by cautioning him that it might be considered a reflection upon the President and an indication that F. D., jr., had succumbed to du Pont influence.

• • • •

FIORELLO LaGUARDIA: Lee Thompson Smith, foreman of the "runaway grand jury" which brought fame to Thomas E. Dewey, is considering resigning his municipal affiliations so that, without bias, he could respond to a subpena in the Hines case.

• • • •

POLICE COMMISSIONER VALENTINE: Last night's report was that Deputy Commissioner of Corrections Marcus will be elevated by a transfer to the police department . . . Jim Moffett: Harry Richman finally has signed the contracts for his new night club at Delmonico's—which will spend $100,000 for the new room. Your daughter, Adelaide Moffett, will sing there . . . Gov. Lehman: One of Albany's noted legislative leaders will be added to the list of those indicted in the gasoline-tax slush-fund case.

• • • •

IRA GERSHWIN: MGM again is negotiating with Eddy Duchin to portray the title role in its forthcoming production of "The Life of George Gershwin" . . . Bruce Barton: Will Cuppy will be the guest speaker at the Rochester convention of N. Y. advertisers. The guests will discover that Cuppy's topic will be "Is the Horse Doomed?" . . . Harry Warner: Your ex-relative, Lina Basquette, will make her debut at Leon & Eddie's next week.

• • • •

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT: The A&P 2,000,000 circulation magazine, The Woman's Day, has completed its private poll selecting two of America's greatest women. The women are you—and Shirley Temple.

• • • •

JUSTICE FERDINAND PECORA: Three of New York's most famous members of the bar—together with a General Sessions' judge—confided yesterday that they agree completely with your decision . . . But all off the record. They haven't the courage you displayed when, in face of what you knew would be a hostile press, you made your decision only in the light of the rules of law. When New York's judiciary starts to base its decisions upon hue and cry and the fear of public clamor, then the black robes should be torn from them and replaced with white hoods. Every liberal in America should salute your courage.

• • • •

NEWSPAPER GUILD: Dennis McEvoy, son of J. P. McEvoy, has departed from Hollywood for a United Press job in Japan . . . George Abbott: Henry Aldrich, the role portrayed by Ezra Stone in your production of "What a Life" will be serialized in a 13-week program with Kate Smith. Stone will be ballyhooed as Kate's cousin . . . Equity: Ina Claire, the distinguished actress, will return to song and dance. She'll appear in a Rodgers & Hart show.

• • • •

FRED ASTAIRE: It's strange to find Guy Endore's credit line on your new picture, "Carefree." Endore is Hollywood's horror-story champ. His best spine-chiller was "The Werewolf of Paris" . . . Helen Jacobs: Maybe you lost because you didn't train on swing music. Although he's still playing in the national championships, Don Budge again visited the Onyx Club last night—and brought Gene Mako with him . . . Chiang Kai-shek: The boycott spirit is strong in Sabu, the Indian boy star of "Drums." He squawked for two hours before accepting his Ritz-Carlton suite—just because he saw a sign, "Japanese Gardens."

• • • •

MILLINERS' UNION: Esquire's Fashion Forum at the Waldorf next week will have a strange note in swank. It will feature men's caps as very stylish . . . Ralph Hitz: Frankie D. Brown, the dusky midget college grad employed at your Glass Hat cafe, just quit to accept a movie contract . . . Pepe d'Albrew: Mrs. Anne Graham Strotz, widow of Jay Gould, who committed suicide this week at the apartment she rented from you, had been at the Stork Club the night before. The management refused to serve her drinks—and she walked out, saying: I've never been so insulted in all my life."

Depend on The Washington Post for Complete, Accurate News Coverage

Reprinted from The Washington Post, Feb. 17, 1938, in

With Three Separate Corps of European Correspondents, The Post Has More Foreign News Available Than Other Washington Papers

The world's oldest and largest news service is the ASSOCIATED PRESS, of which The Washington Post is a member. Second only to the AP in size and importance is the UNITED PRESS, whose news service is also supplied to The Washington Post. By having the AP and the UP and the NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE service as sources of European and other news, The Washington Post has a tremendous advantage in giving its readers the news first, most complete, most accurate. First—because, although one news service might scoop the others, The Post gets the news in any case. Most complete — because news missed by one will be supplied by one or both of the others. Most accurate—because the editor of The Post has three different stories to compare. Because no other Washington newspaper has comparable news sources, The Post is outstanding in its ability to give you the news completely, accurately and unbiased.

Famous Writers Interpret the News Through Editorials and Columns

Editorials by Felix Morley

Before taking on the duties of an editor, Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, spent a number of years abroad as a foreign correspondent. His editorials reflect that experience in the foreign field, reflect, too, the ability as analyst and writer which won him the Pulitzer Prize for the excellence of the editorials in The Washington Post. You will find that The Washington Post's editorials give you a new insight as to the meaning of events.

"Today and Tomorrow" by Walter Lippmann

His work with Col. House during the peace treaty negotiations gave Walter Lippmann an invaluable understanding of the hates, fears, passions, ambitions, which keep Europe in turmoil. His later work as editor of the New York World established his reputation as a writer of remarkable insight and ability to interpret the news in plain terms to the reader. His column, "Today and Tomorrow," in The Washington Post makes world events clear and easily understandable.

"On the Record" by Dorothy Thompson

Dorothy Thompson spent eight years in Europe, showing an uncanny ability to be where things were happening. She has interviewed Europe's leading statesmen, and it was her interview, "I Saw Hitler," that caused her expulsion from Germany, where she had been chief of a central European news bureau. She has a complete understanding of motives as well as events and the courage to speak out against the wrongs she feels must be righted. Her column appears exclusively in The Post, in Washington.

Articles by Barnet Nover

Of Barnet Nover, The Post's own expert on foreign affairs, John Gunther, author of "Inside Europe," wrote recently: "His columns on foreign news seem to me to be far and away the best comment of this type that I have seen anywhere in America . . . really first-rate, full of good information, good sense, and good writing." Nover's articles on foreign affairs appear on the Current Events Page of The Washington Post and give Post readers still more information on what is happening abroad.

These Men Head the Staffs of Foreign Correspondents Who Send News to The Post by Special Cables

In the most important world capitals the New York Herald Tribune service has its own offices, staffed by expert correspondents available to send at a moment's notice to spots where the news is breaking. These correspondents send their stories by direct cables to the New York Herald Tribune, which in turn relays them to The Washington Post. These correspondents not only supplement the news supplied by the AP and UP, but also provide special news stories of great importance, because they shed a new light on the day's developments.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is It Fair for Business Woman to Ask Husband to Help With Housework When Both Are Tired?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married a little over two years and have held my job the whole time. Up until very recently, we had a combined housekeeper-and-cook who took care of our apartment and prepared the meals. But we had to let her go on account of certain circumstances that have arisen. We also moved into a larger apartment which entails more work.

Our problem is: My husband does not give me the help in taking care of the house that I think he should. I maintain that as long as I do a "man's work" outside the home, he should be willing to do a "woman's work" inside. When I prepare a meal, he thinks his work is done when he wipes the dishes and sweeps the floor. I think he should be willing to dust the furniture, help in the preparation of meals, etc.

He states that he is tired after a day's work (he does work hard) and that he wants to come home to a clean house and appetizing meals. I don't blame him one bit. I would too. But so do I work hard. My nerves are frazzled when I leave the office at night, but that is just the hour when my heavy work begins—shopping, cooking, cleaning, etc., and to cap the climax, I have to keep a smile on my face while I do it.

Frankly, without 50 per cent co-operation from my husband, the task is just too much for me. I will say that he appreciates all I do, and is quick to tell me so. I guess the good Lord never meant a woman to have two careers, and that in general, when she does, she runs into trouble ahead. You might say that the solution of the problem is for me to give up my job, but this seems out of the question, in view of the regular expenses we have to meet, and the high cost of living in Washington. My husband and I have no other marital problems of any sort. We get along marvelously (or did) and have never quarreled over finances, women, liquor or any of the other ills so common to marriage.

I have reached the neurotic stage of weariness and am tempted to indulge in self-pity to a dangerous degree . . . I feel that unless the situation is solved, our happiness may be destroyed, as I am too tired to be a pleasant marital companion to my husband, despite the fact that I love him very much. I find it impossible to refrain from petty bickering. Already I see the handwriting on the wall which points to eventual separation and possibly divorce, unless I can find a saving way out of, or around, this problem. What do you advise? We shall try to abide by your suggestions. Perhaps some of your readers have conquered a similar problem. If so, I should like to have their opinions, as well. DOLORES.

A Better Solution.

DEAR DOLORES: It seems reasonable to suppose that the average employed couple belonging to the so-called "white collar" class would earn, at a minimum, a combined income of around $200 a month. Where there are no children (and I take it there are none in this instance) the couple, by careful money management, should easily be able to afford the services of a cleaning woman at least once a week. As a matter of fact, they should be able to go further and employ a part-time maid to put the apartment in order daily and prepare dinner, since this type of service is not only more satisfactory but actually less expensive, figured item by item, in the long run.

Moreover, it doesn't make sense that a couple who found themselves financially unable to retain a combined cook-and housekeeper would deliberately borrow trouble by taking a larger apartment, when a triple economy of time, effort and money might have been effected by moving into an even smaller apartment than the one formerly occupied. It must be that mismanagement of either time or money, or both, is primarily responsible for your current predicament.

You speak of the day's "heavy work" beginning at office closing time, with "shopping, cleaning, cooking, etc." waiting to be done. This suggests a decidedly helter-skelter method of housekeeping. It would be far better if you planned your household duties and daily menus a week in advance, and started your day early rather than ended it late; if you did the bulk of your marketing on week-ends (keeping your pantry shelves well stocked with canned goods and staples) and obviated the necessity of shopping for perishables more than twice or thrice a week at most; if you had certain days for doing certain chores and didn't try to crowd them, hit or miss, into any and all odd hours.

Instead of rising with just enough time to get dressed and bolt a bite of breakfast before catching the last car for the office, start your day an hour—or preferably, two hours—earlier than has been your erstwhile custom. You cannot possibly estimate the restful efficiency of such a system until you have tried it. It saves wear-and-tear on the nervous system and gives you time to put the house in order and start preparations for dinner before leaving for the office.

I know one business woman with no servant, whose home and whose self are always serene and immaculate, who prepares two meals a day for herself and her husband and does all her own housework, who has, for years, risen regularly at 5:30 a. m., regardless of how late she retired the night before. She thoroughly enjoys the sense of leisure and competence which this early morning margin of time gives her and wouldn't relinquish the necessity acquired habit for anything.

Regardless of the possible basic justice of a business woman's assumption that her husband should be willing to assume co-equal responsibility for doing the housework, the fact remains that, in 99 cases out of 100, she is simply bringing trouble on herself in trying to press him into service as a maid-of-all-work against his will. If he assumes the burden cheerfully — fair enough—well and good. But if he balks at it—better let well enough alone and find some other way around the mountain of work to be done. Far better, indeed (for the marriage's sake; for her security's and happiness' sake), to consider the alternative possibilities of resigning her business post and devoting herself full-time to home management, on the one hand; or of shaving various items in the family budget, on the other hand, toward the end of employing a competent servant.

Stripes Are Popular In New Collections

Paris (U.P.).—The stripe, more or less regular in form, seems to have been the motivation for most of the fall and winter reliefs, prints and weaves. Stripes and bands meet your eye on whatever shelf you look. Ribbed woolens, petershams, rich ottomans, prints—even lace—all derive some benefit from the stripe.

Winter wools simulate velvet in their softness and suppleness. Their weaves are so close that they may sometimes be a little hard to wear. There will be lots of plaids—not too blatant—and tweeds with brilliant threads weaving through a fairly conservative background.

Stylist Sees A Trend Back To Victoria

Mme. Colbo Exuberant Over Return Toward Simplicity, and Praises Luscious Red Lips

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

INDICATIONS from French and Italian capitals point to a wondrous new type of beauty destined to make fashion and beauty history this season, according to Mme. Elizabeth Colbo, internationally known cosmetologist. This vivacious Russian-born, Parisian and Viennese educated beauty authority, just returned from extensive European beauty research, and visiting Washington for a few days on business, was characteristically exuberant in discussing her newest crop of beauty secrets.

"Grandmamas would stare incredulously at the number of beautifying agents available to her grandchild today," chuckled Mme. Colbo, "and yet the most recent trend I noticed in Paris, Florence, Rome and all over the continent was that of borrowing figure, face and style straight from her closets. Victorianism has swept into all the collections. Camisoles and hour-glass inspired girdles have recaptured her curves; and her beauty of skin, hair, eyes and coloring has the same lush gentility as that of the swooning Edwardian belles."

Lip Rouge Important

The soignee Mme. Colbo gave substance to her observations through her own chic presence, for her hair was worn in the effortless simplicity of the "little queen" Victoria, whose tastes she feels are once again strongly touching fashion's pulse. Brightly accented lips and creamy skin also showed signs of her having profited by her recent observations, for she stressed the solitary exclamation of color as essential for smart fall make-ups. "Women seeking the popular fragile look of a dainty Bisque doll," she commented, "must be careful of minute details of grooming. Skin must be smoothly blended with warm toned creams and bases to produce a natural unmade-up look, the only exception being in red-velvet lips. Nails, all over Europe, are clear, clean or faintly tinted to carry out the scrubbed and showered look," she continued. "The only emphasis of color in the lovely faces I saw was in bright, bright lips.

"British royalty's recent French visit not only revived Victorianism as the No. 1 beauty theme, but cosmetic colors have been directly influenced. New lipstick tones are regal, with such strident colors as crimson, scarlet and sirenish red with purplish and mauve undertones peeping through, adding seductive contrast to the simplicity of exposed ears and rougeless cheeks. For women who definitely need color in their cheeks, matching royal red lip and cream or compact rouges must be identical in tone."

Conceded as being the only Sorbonne-trained medical expert in the cosmetic field, which she essayed over 15 years ago, Mme. Colbo showed scientific interest in the wax treatments now being used for necks and arms. "These wax masks are beneficial in ridding throats, hands, arms and legs of unsightly hair," she stated, "for with coiffures sweeping higher and higher, the back of the neck, in particular, must be hairless, creamy white and smooth as a baby's. Our grandmothers had no such easily applied or removed disguises, or such subtle new eye shadows and lotions as are making the continental and American women into the world's most renowned beauties, even though manufactured ones."

Studies Continental Allure

MADAM COLBO, recognized authority on cosmetic science, foresees this season's beauties as provocative creatures combining Victorian modesty of complexion tone with strictly modern accent of scarlet lips.

A Woman's New York

—by Alice Hughes

NEW YORK'S most publicized street, in the past few years, has been that short and dizzy block of West Fifty-second street between proud Fifth avenue and slightly sleazy Sixth. That is "Swing alley," or any one of a half-dozen other names. Along its borders are such nationally known institutions as 21, Leon and Eddie's, the Famous Door, the Onyx Club, the Club 18, over which daffy Jack White presides. It is a street of midnight madness—and yet people to live on it, too; and live there pleasantly, strange as it may seem.

ALICE HUGHES.

My own sister, for one. This fall she discovered a perfect gem of a four-room apartment, at the Fifth avenue end of "Swing alley." No raucous band music penetrates its spacious living room; it is as quiet and remote as though it were in the rural reaches of the Bronx. She's going to have a very pleasant life there, at the very brink of bedlam. Of course, there may be an amusing catch in this utopia, somewhere. If it turns up, I'll report it in due course.

One or two famous old New York families still maintain their town homes on that dizzy thoroughfare, notably that of T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, a name well-known in local song and story. And in that very house, just a month from now, his pretty and peppy granddaughter, LeBrun Rhinelander, is to marry Bill McKnight. Her grandpa, the Major, seems to have taken command of the ceremony, and the fine old Rhinelander town manse, utterly surrounded by honky-tonks of the noisier sort, will be the scene of an upper-crust Gotham wedding in the old tradition.

So keep open that date, October 14. It will be a strange and wondrous mingling of New York old and new, the sleek motors of the socialites fighting with the jockeying taxis for the possession of "Swing alley!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A common sight here, in the heat of the business day, is a pretty girl strolling the crowded highway in the company of a robust policeman, complete with club and pistol. It is not law-business, for the lady is not under arrest. It is not romance; they are not sweeties taking the air. She is a secretary carrying thousands of dollars in pay roll money on her person; he is her protective escort. Wise is the firm which asks such protection for its pay-money girls, for hundreds of them have been held up and robbed in the past few years.

The best family reunion of the month has brought most of the Fred Stone family togethere here. Old Fred himself is starring in the revived "Lightning'," and Mrs. Stone and daughters Carol and Dorothy have re-lighted the old Stone house in Forest Hills, after a long absence in Hollywood. There's a real elegant family.

I hear that the Betty Lawford bathtub girl role in "The Women" will be played in the Australian company by the blonde eyeful, Mary Dees, who was the late Jean Harlow's double in "Saratoga." Betty is seen about town these evenings but not with Ted Husing. That romance lasted a long time, but went bump, after all.

The prettiest immigrant from the movie coast, these nights, is Patricia Ellis, the little tow-head now beginning a career as a torch-singer. She's been thrilling at Master Billy Rose's Casa Manana, and in all truth she looks a great deal better than she listens.

Although the first frost is yet afar off, we trust, Mr. Rockefeller is beginning to think about flooding his sunken plaza along Fifth avenue for skating purposes, and Sonja Henie fans recall with joy and longing the fact that the Scandinavian sprite is due at Madison Square Garden in January for another thrilling session on the blades.

Whom did I see at Leon and Eddie's, one of our noisiest and gayest hot-spots, but quiet, hand-waving Zasu Pitts. Maybe Zasu is shifting her type!

Always one interested in kitchen gadgetry, I have recently been fascinated by a lettuce-shaker! Yet, this dingus, imported from England, is a sphere of fine wire mesh in which the lettuce is placed, all wet, and shaken until dry. This is said to absolutely guarantee that the tender leaves will not be bruised in the drying process. Well, there's a new thought for you in the gift line—a lettuce-shaker. Civilization hurries on!

Narrow-shouldered women probably will not be offered the advantages of wide and padded shoulders this season. But high, stand-up collars undoubtedly will be revived because of the brushed-up coiffures.

Editor Finds Home Is Man's Place

She Tells How to Cater to Male Element and Defies Feminists to Future Debate

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MONDAY—Downtown to lunch with a man who knows all there is to know about wallpaper. We planned some exciting new rooms that I'll photograph later—one with a flowered ceiling, another with a flowered alcove. After all, decorating has to live up to a season of upped hair and crinolines! A few tables away sat Elmer Rice, the playwright, novelist and Pulitzer prize winner, wearing a white suit and dark shirt. Once we crossed the Pacific on the same Japanese liner with Mr. and Mrs. Rice and a 'teen-age son and daughter who played smashing games of ping pong.

TUESDAY—Spent most of the day framing little old family photographs—then hung them all in two groups on either side of a window in the upstairs sitting room which is where we really live. A frayed and sagging room, but it's a grand spot to sink into with a good book—even better for building skyscrapers out of blocks and running toy trains.

Dynamic Bedroom

WEDNESDAY—Saw an unexpectedly charming bedroom in an exhibit today—the walls were papered in a dramatic wide floral striped paper with huge splashy red flowers predominating. Against one wall was a good sized drum table with a lamp and books and drawn up to it two easy chairs in green. There's a room that's dynamic enough for a man with its vigorous color and substantial comfortable furniture.

THURSDAY—Tea with a friend who is program chairman of the Woman's Society of our church. I've promised to speechify at one meeting next year—being a crank on the subject of woman's place being in the home. I'm always having arguments with the members who think women should be out in the fray. I threatened that I'd probably talk about how he could change the world right at home. So they can't say they weren't warned!

Planning and Fixing

FRIDAY—Just had word that my company will arrive, six strong, in time for lunch tomorrow. So I've spent the morning with pencil and paper, making menus, checking sheets, arranging with neighbors who will contribute guest rooms to the cause. I must admit that I get quite a thrill out of bustling around, planning and fixing.

SATURDAY — Up early this morning to arrange flowers, take off the summer slip covers and put up the winter draperies. And then to the last-minute preparations for lunch (home-made onion soup, beet and aspic salad and ginger bread—all made yesterday). For supper I'll have the ham that's baking in the oven this minute and smelling so good.

SUNDAY — Tonight all our friends and relations will be here for buffet supper to meet our guests from China. I'll set the table on the lawn and have the Japanese lanterns strung up—do hope that doesn't cause international complications.

Hazel Young's Menus Please Hungry Men

New Book Also Shows How Working Girls Quickly and Easily May Snap Together Meal After Work.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHILE currently the accepted way to a man's heart seems to be through his eyes, it is not a bad idea to reinforce it with grandmother's plan, and in her new book, "The Working Girl Must Eat," Hazel Young has included the basic menus and recipes that are sure to win masculine approval.

Miss Young tells you exactly how to broil a steak to the masculine taste, how to make those good French fried potatoes, a French dressing that will make him like your salad, how to make good coffee every time . . . and then she lets you in on the secret of those biscuits his mother used to make.

As the title implies, the main purpose of the book is to interest the working girl in good food, properly prepared. Of course you do not want to go home and slave over a cookstove after a hard day at the office, and this practical guide to good cooking offers an amazing number of shortcuts to eliminate the drudgery.

Frozen Foods Helpful

Besides streamlining some of the dishes that made grandmother famous, Miss Young has thoughtfully included the prepared foods which make cooking easier and which cut down the time it takes to get a meal. Did you know that you can buy gingerbread and biscuit mix ready to bake? There are stews all prepared, and quick frozen vegetables, meats and fish, all ready to put right on the stove, and they are a great help to the girl who dashes home after 5 o'clock to get dinner.

One of the best things about this book is the work plan, which tells how to get everything ready at the right time and with the minimum of effort. Also, if you follow the menus consecutively, one meal will give you a start on the next—which is a decided time saver as well as a step in the direction of economy.

While this book should be of particular interest to the working girl who is either normal weight or a bit too thin, the writer has suggested a scheme by which the menus may be modified to furnish fewer calories, and has given a new recipe for Reducer's French Dressing, which appears at the end of today's menu.

Balanced Menus Key

Both the girls who are too thin and those who are too fat seem to have much the same idea about food. The reducers try o pick out one or two foods to lose weight on, and the underweights think they must concentrate on a couple of fattening foods. What happens in both cases is that a monotonous diet soon becomes tiresome. The overweight goes back to overeating and the underweight loses all interest in food. Balanced menus are the key to your weight problem, and Miss Young has carefully balanced her menu suggestion for a consistently protective diet.

Fall Accessories Fitted Into New and Old Homes

Whether your home is "done" in the traditional manner or in the modern mode, there will be accessories to fit into your picture this fall.

For the traditional minded, such new items as dried and tinted straw flowers, either tied in bouquets or placed in realistic fashion in composition vases, have been framed as pictures, reminiscent of grandmother's day. In the same "traditional" feeling, many lamps are being shown which are less decorated than lamps have been for several seasons. Shades are darker and less opaque, giving a definitely "formal" feeling to the lamps.

Charles Edison Gives Luncheon to Officers of d'Entrecasteaux, French Training Ship, and Senor Castillo de Najera Toasts Mexican Independence

The men yesterday had their day in the social sun with two large parties, both completely stag, taking first place in goings-on.

One was the luncheon given by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, in compliment to the officers of the French ship, D'Entrecasteaux, which steamed into the Capital's social horizon via the Navy Yard the middle of this week; and the other was the informal reception at the Mexican Embassy celebrating that country's independence day.

The ranking guest at Mr. Edison's feast at the Mayflower was the French Ambassador, Count Rene de St. Quentin, and the others present, in addition to the visiting sailors, included high ranking officials of the United States Navy and Marine Corps. These were Rear Admiral George Ettengill, Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, Brig. Gen. Clayton B. Vogel, U. S. M. C.; Commander Louis E. Denfield, Commander Harold J. Nelson, Commander Nathaniel M. Pigman, Lieut. Comdr. R. F. Cope, and Capt. C. P. Van Ness, U. S. M. C., and also Jay Pierrepont Moffat.

Embassy Staff At Luncheon

From the French Embassy came Jacques Truelle, counsellor; Commander Pierre Benech, naval attache; Jacques Dumaine and Armand Berard.

The much-feted guests of honor were, of course, Capt. P. M. L. Serpette, Capt. G. J. de Coudenhove, Ensign M. J. Lovallay, Ensign G. A. Decugis, Ensign J. Tellier and Ensign C. M. Le Cour-Grandmaison.

A little later in the afternoon champagne was being quaffed at the Mexican Embassy to celebrate the day in 1810 when the republic south of the Rio Grande proclaimed itself no longer a possession of Spain. The festivities took place from 5 to 7, and marked a continuance of the new trend this season, which seems to be making considerably less of independence days this year than it did last, when practically every party that took place in diplomatic circles marking such anniversaries were occasions attended by hundreds of guests and a great deal of oom-pah.

Laurence Duggan Is at Reception

Among the handful who checked their hats and passed down the receiving line to greet Ambassador Castillo de Najera were Laurence Duggan, chief of the Division of American Republics of the Department of State; Pierre deL. Boal, Counselor of the United States Embassy in Mexico City, who is in Washington for a brief stay; Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, and Mr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union.

Also present were members of the Embassy staff and representatives from the Capital's Mexican colony.

Mrs. Davison Dies

Friends of Forrester Davison have been grieved to learn of the death Thursday of his mother, Mrs. James MacGregor Davison. Mr. Davison left Washington about a week ago to rush to her home at Halifax, Nova Scotia, when she became ill.

Crisis Nips Hull Vacation Plan

Now, as at all times during the season, Cabinet members may come and go, but the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, stays close to his desk. Mrs. Hull, who has been in Atlantic City for the past few days, however, has made no definite plans for returning to the Capital. Plans for the Secretary to join her there have had to be discarded, as his work at this time is such that he feels he cannot leave.

Among Cabinet members away for the week-end is the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, jr., who has joined his family at Fishkill Farm, near Hyde Park. He is expected to return the first of next week. Mrs. Morgenthau will not come to the Capital until October.

The Postmaster General, James A. Farley, whose sojourns in Washington have been very brief for the past few months, has returned to New York to be with his family over the week-end. He is expected back in Washington next week.

Miss Thompson Becomes Engaged To John Cuddy

Mrs. John M. Thompson, of this city, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lorraine Janet Thompson, to John Martin Cuddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthias Cuddy, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Their wedding will take place early in the spring and they will make their home at Miami, Fla., where Mr. Cuddy will be a member of the faculty of Max Fleischer School of Art.

The bride-elect, a daughter of the late Dr. John M. Thompson, of Webster, Mass., was graduated from Immaculata Seminary in Washington. She also attended the Katharine Gibbs School in New York and now is with the Treasury Department.

Mrs. Day Guest At Heathcote

Mrs. W. Julian Day, who has spent much time in New York and on Long Island this summer has been the guest of Col. and Mrs. Charles Bauer at Heathcote, Westbury, Long Island.

Among parties given by Col. and Mrs. Bauer since Mrs. Day has been their guest was a barbecue at their estate last week when there were 90 persons in the company, including many from aviation circles at Mitchell Field.

Before returning to Washington the latter part of this month, Mrs. Day will spend some time with her daughter, Mrs. Logan Hill, who lives at Manhasset. According to present plans, Mrs. Day will reopen her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel the latter part of this month or early in October. She expects to be here most of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss Plan Addition to Georgetown Home

Robert Woods Bliss, former United States Ambassador to the Argentine, and Mrs. Bliss are busy with plans for building an addition to their already spacious house in Georgetown.

They have applied for a permit for a "brick, concrete and stone" addition to 3101 R street, the address of their city estate, "Dumbarton Oaks."

Mr. Cooney Weds Zella Cofer

St. Matthew's Church yesterday morning at 9 o'clock was the scene of the wedding of Miss Zella Cofer, daughter of Mrs. Mary T. Cofer of this city and the late Guy Cofer, of Bluefield, W. Va., to Paul Patrick Cooney. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Cooney, of Oelwein, Iowa. The Rev. William F. Stricker celebrated the nuptial mass before an altar decorated with gold and brown dahlias and ferns. Joseph Waters sang Schubert's "Ave Maria."

The bride wore a dress of phantom colored crepe, a small felt hat of forest green and accessories of the same color. Her jewelry furnished an accent of old gold to the costume and her corsage was of deep purple orchids.

Mrs. Ellen C. Allen was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. She was attired in burgundy-colored crepe with matching accessories and wore a corsage of rubin lilies surrounded by yellow rosebuds. Coral Fenner, of Oelwein, was best man.

At the wedding breakfast and informal ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, the latter was gowned in navy blue crepe with which she had a corsage of blue and white asters.

After a trip to the Midwest, during which they will visit Chicago, Oelwein and Fort Wayne, Ind., the couple will live here at the Sedgwick Apartments.

The former Miss Cofer is a graduate of Vaughn's Institute in Roanoke, Va., while her husband is an alumnus of Columbia College in Dubuque, Iowa, and of the Columbus University Law School here. He is a member of the staff of the Division of Press Intelligence for the United States Government.

Select Debut Date

Major and Mrs. Richard H. Jeschke have selected Monday, December 26, as the date on which they will present their daughter, Margaret, at a tea. The party will take place at "Portledge," the Chevy Chase home of the debutante's grandmother, Mrs. John Ryan Devereux. The Jeschkes are now living at 1908 Arlington Ridge Road, Arlington, Va.

Miss Van Dyke's Wedding Today

At a simple ceremony at 3 o'clock this afternoon at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Miss Mabel Van Dyke, daughter of Mrs. William Calhoun Furr and the late William Mandeville Van Dyke, will become the bride of Frank L. Baer. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. John S. Baer and the late Mr. Baer. The rites will be solemnized by Dr. U. G. B. Pierce.

Miss Esma Maybee will be Miss Van Dyke's only attendant while Lawrence C. Staples will serve as best man.

The bride-to-be is an alumna of George Washington University and has been active in the work of the National Woman's Party. She is also well known in Washington's little theater circles. Mr. Baer, a former Washington newspaperman, is now engaged in publicity and public relations work.

The couple will make their home in this city following their wedding trip.

Vandenbergs To Stay in West Till November

Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg will not be settled in their apartment at the Wardman Park for the winter season much before the early part of November, and possibly as late as December.

They have been spending the summer at their cottage at Holland, Mich., and now that the cool weather is beginning will make several trips hither and yon before arriving in the Capital.

Mrs. Vandenberg will go with her husband to Saginaw, where he is scheduled to speak before the League of Women Voters September 28. The following day she will take the rostrum herself at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where she will address members of the student body. On this occasion she ought to come in for more than usual applause for she has had a leading part in raising funds for a new women's building at the university.

Gen. and Mrs. Holcomb Will Return Tomorrow

Marjorie Webster, in Red Coat, Presides and Adelaide Hibberd Presents a Scene From 'Mrs. Wiggs'

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Hundreds of patrons swarmed the "Streets of Paris," annual alley fete of the Women's City Club, last night behind the clubhouse, 726 Jackson place, under the chairmanship of Miss Elva McNamara.

Posters, tables for the Cafe Boulevard, under the direction of Miss Nell Price, the Cafe de la Paix, in charges of Mrs. Edgar T. Brown; booths for the Thieves Market and Flea Market with Miss Jessie Lane in charge, were put in place by a corps of workers as soon as the alley had been well scrubbed at 6 o'clock. Maj. Ernest Brown assigned special officers to patrol the "streets" and they made themselves both useful and popular by assisting in tacking up the street signs and arranging the booths when they first arrived.

Within the enclosure of the high red brick garden wall was the Cafe du Jardin, where Miss Carol Cox, chairman of the Junior Guild, and a group of other juniors served. The girls wore picturesque costumes and red and white checked cloths covered the cafe tables, placed beneath the colored lanterns which lighted the garden.

Miss Marjorie Webster, club president, in a red gown and red mandarin coat, 150 years old, presided during the program which was presented at 8:30 at the north end of the alley. Adelaide Hibberd, formerly with the National Theater Players, presented a scene from "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," in the character of Mrs. Wiggs; Miss Florence McCracken gave impersonations of well-known women, and Mrs. Sylvia Ziskind entertained with humorous readings.

There were also dancers including Dorothy Ross, Betty H. Hardwell and Mary Hopper, members of the Washington Dance Association of which Evelyn Davis is president. They presented dances of the modern school and Virginia Berry appeared in tap and Hungarian numbers. There were also soprano solos by Stella Arsenaeu.

Mrs. Jean Bennet was chairman of the program and Henry Stewart master of ceremonies for general dancing inside the clubhouse which began at the close of the entertainment. Miss Lois Garlock was chairman of tickets.

The alley fete, which was inaugurated last year by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, then president of the club, has gained a reputation about town and was one of the most successful benefit parties the club has given.

Madame Chairman

THE ONLY organization ever to write into a law absolute equality for women is the National Federation of Federal Employes, of which Miss Gertrude M. McNally is secretary-treasurer. Miss McNally, who has served as a national officer for 20 years, and Luther C. Steward, founder and president, are being honored tonight at a testimonial dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

In the classification act, secured by the federation in 1920, there is a provision that women shall be paid the same salary as men for the same work. Both Miss McNally and Mr. Steward were instrumental in the success of the campaign for the passage of this law.

She has been secretary of the Women's Union of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving for 30 years and was named secretary-treasurer of the national federation after having served as vice president. Mr. Steward has been president since the first year the organization was formed.

Among those on the program tonight will be John Fitzgerald, of New York City, first vice president, and Charles L. Wiegand, of Baltimore, second vice president, both of whom were delegates to the first national convention here in September, 1917. Others will be Lucille Foster McMillan, Civil Service Commissioner; Ulrey J. Biller and Irving F. Wixon, of the Bureau of Immigration; Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Edward Keating, editor of Labor, and John J. Barrett, chairman of the national legislative council of the Federation of Employe Organizations.

Officials from Government departments in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania will be among the guests. Joseph Stansfield, president of the organization, will open the program and Henry G. Nolda will act as toastmaster.

A FEATURE OF the setting for the convention of the District of Columbia State Council, Daughters of America, just closed at the Mayflower Hotel, was the arch of welcome which stood before the councilor's station, displaying 100 small American flags. It was designed and built by John Tucker, who for three years, has been a member of Independent Council No. 2. He spends most of his spare time making easels, ballot boxes and miniature schoolhouses which he presents to the various councils of the order.

This is his hobby and he may be found almost any time in the little workshop in the basement of his home, making something for one of the councils. He always presents the gifts as a surprise.

Chinese Expert On Theater Visits Capital

Miss Zung, Member of Shanghai Bar, Will Lecture Tomorrow on Her Country's Drama

This is an interview on China—and it has nothing to do with war. It's about the Chinese theater and Sieu-Ling Zung, who has loved it since she was 4 years old and is now preparing to interpret the classic theater of the East to the western world, and that of the West to her own people.

Miss Zung is here for a week as the guest of Mrs. Richard Hogue, neice of Miss Lelia Tuttle, who was one of Miss Zung's teachers in China. Tomorrow night she will present a lecture-recital on the Chinese Theater, at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, of which Mrs. Hogue is past president.

The ingenuous charm and spontaneity with which she discussed the theater and the progress in her country during the past 20 years, were lost in soberness when reference was made to war conditions—but the theater was our subject.

At the age of 4, Miss Zung's parents took her to attend classic Chinese plays—beginning at 7 and continuing until 2 p. m.

"I loved it from the first time I ever went," said Miss Zung. "If China had not then been so old-fashioned that the profession was taboo for me, I should probably have been an actress. As it is, I became a lawyer, and I really hate law."

After being graduated from McTiere School in Shanghai, where Miss Tuttle taught, Miss Zung, who is of a Chinese family of high rank, found herself forced into the legal profession, she said. Involved in a lawsuit when it was considered almost a disgrace for a woman to enter a court, she discovered she knew nothing about law or court procedure. This was in 1929. She promptly entered Soochow University for the study of law, handled her own case, which was a prolonged one, and by the time of her graduation in 1934, she had won it. She is now one of 50 women lawyers in Shanghai. The women are members, with the men, of the Shanghai Bar Association, and under the new Chinese laws have equal rights in all fields.

Attainment of a bachelor's and a master's degree in law was no hinderance to Miss Zung's pursuit of her interest in the theater. She wrote a book "Secrets of the Chinese Drama," published in English, interpreting the symbolism and technique of the Chinese theater for the western world. Mei Lan-Fang, great Chinese actor, worked with her for four months illustrating for her the significance of gestures and other details which she required for absolute accuracy in her book.

One of the first requisites for an actor in China is a good voice—not judged as we judge voices, Miss Zung added, but nevertheless, with both sweet quality and volume as important factors. Much of the old Chinese drama includes parts which are sung and Miss Zung—musician as well as author and lawyer—has transcribed the Chinese melodies and arranged them for the piano.

She took her bachelor of arts degree last year at Columbia University, and this summer studied under Prof. Walter Prichard Eaton of Yale at Breadloaf. Two plays, presenting the contrast of ancient and modern China, were the result of her summer's work. One is "Mandarin Ducks" and the other, "Don't Put the Chop Sticks on the Bowl", both produced at the little theater there.

This fall she is preparing to return for graduate work at Columbia and will also give such lecture-recitals as she is presenting tomorrow at the A. A. U. W. She wears Chinese stage costumes of great value and beauty and illustrates the technique of the theater with which her book deals.

Last evening she was met on her arrival in Washington by Mrs. Lewis Chase who has taught in China at one time or another for more than 20 years. In her apartment are screens, scrolls, handsomely carved teakwood furniture and other treasures of the Orient which made a setting into which Miss Zung, in her native robe, fitted as though shee belonged. After a call on Mrs. Chase whom she knew well in Shanghai, she went to Mrs. Hogue's home.

Jerry's Find.

Sometimes you'll find it just as well
If certain things you do not tell.
—Old Mother Nature.

The new house was finished and Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry were proud of it. They had reason to be. Yes, sir, they had reason to be proud of that house. It was in every way a good house. That is, it was a good house for Muskrats. It was well placed among the cattails growing at one end of a big slough. It was on a good foundation and that foundation was entirely surrounded by water of good depth. It was what might be called a sort of moat that surrounded it. This had been made by cutting away the rushes and cattails for quite a distance around the foundation of the house and then digging out the roots and the mud and piling them on the foundation, thus deepening the water and at the same time building up the foundation.

The house on this was made of rushes and grass, mostly rushes. It was dome shaped so that the water would run off when rain fell. Inside was a nice room plenty big enough for the two builders. At one side was a hole in the floor. This was called the plunge hole. It was the only entrance. It was the opening to a tunnel and that tunnel was filled with water. The other entrance to that tunnel was out in the bottom of the pond where the water was too deep ever to freeze to the bottom. Inside the room was a comfortable bed of shredded rushes. What more could anyone ask of a house?

With the house built Jerry and Mrs. Jerry had other matters to attend to. Here and there they built little mud platforms whereon to sit while feeding or to rest and keep watch. They dug canals in places where the water was too shallow for swimming yet which they wanted to visit when looking for food. They located all the best feeding places. And in doing all these things they were extremely happy. It seemed to them that in this new home of theirs, this big slough with its pond and marshy shores, was everything to make them happy.

Then one day Jerry made a find. He had crawled up on an old log partly in the water and partly on the muddy shore. At first he didn't notice anything out of the way. Then he noticed a small rusty chain hanging over one side of the log and his heart seemed to miss a beat. He had seen small rusty chains like this one before. He knew what it meant. Somewhat fearfully he peered down in the water. Nearly buried in the mud was a trap. The jaws of that trap held fast a bone. It was the leg bone of someone who had been caught in those dreadful steel jaws and then had gnawed or twisted off that leg, leaving it in the trap.

Instantly, Jerry remembered the hint that Longlegs the Heron had dropped and that had given him the only uneasiness that he had felt since he had come to this new home. Longlegs had told him that once there had been many Muskrats living in this old slough, but all had disappeared, and Longlegs had warned him to keep out of sight if ever he saw any of those two-legged folks called men about.

"So that's it," muttered Jerry. "It is because of trappers that those who used to live here disappeared. I wondered. This is such a wonderful place it seemed too good to be true."

At once he plunged into the water and started for home to tell Mrs. Jerry what he had found. Presently he stopped swimming and floated. There were no trappers now, for the weather was not yet cold enough, the trapping season hadn't begun. Perhaps having caught all the Muskrats who had lived here the trapper would not expect to find any now and would not return. Why worry Mrs. Jerry until there might be need of a warning?

So Jerry said nothing about his find. But he couldn't forget it. It worried him. He couldn't forget that bone in those cruel steel jaws. He knew what it meant for he had seen those who had escaped from traps in just that dreadful way and then spent the rest of their lives with only three legs. He shivered at the memory. And he kept away from that log where the trap was, although he knew that it was harmless now. How did it happen to be there? The trapper had forgotten it.

Mutual Regard Urged to End Traffic Killing

Gen. Cox Tells Driver and Pedestrian They Must Learn to Think of Other's Rights

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A dramatic appeal for continued efforts to protect life and property on Washington streets was sounded yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the Commissioners' traffic advisory committee.

Speaking at the first in a scheduled series of safety radio broadcasts, Gen. Cox called for equal cooperation among motorists and pedestrians, urging each group to share responsibilities in current accident prevention movements.

Death Takes a Ride

The program featured the choral speaking class at Western High School in a vivid warning against the consequences of highway recklessness. A choral playlet, "The Other Passenger," depicted death riding with a drunken driver.

Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local A. A. A. club, told of the Commissioners' efforts to reduce the citys casualty toll and pointed out that only one child has met death since the new committee was founded.

In stressing the necessity for complete co-operation between drivers and pedestrians, Gen. Cox condemned both sides for refusal to "pull together." He said:

"A bitter war may continue to be waged between drivers and pedestrians until we all become better educated to our responsibilities. The man afoot holds a smouldering grudge against the man behind the steering wheel largely because he knows that his brittle bones have no more chance against swift moving steel than an eggshell under a steamroller.

"Meanwhile, the driver keeps a grudge against the pedestrian because he presents such an unpredictable, erratic and helpless hazard to safe driving. Both are treating themselves to the luxury of self-pity, because each has a definite, traceable part in creating the inexcusable number of fatalities and injuries on our streets."

He described as "witless" the actions of motorists who "rocket down our roadways at unreasonable speeds' 'and pedestrians who "stupidly step out into moving streams of traffic from behind parked cars or against red lights."

Pedestrian Not Blameless

"Apparently the foot traveler," continued Gen. Cox, "does not realize that in the automobile age he must obey traffic rules just as strictly as the motorist is required to do. If he does not, he is not only exposing himself to destruction, but he is placing the motorist in the unhappy position of creating an unwanted—and probably unavoidable—accident."

The traffic advisory committee, said Gen. Cox, will continue its program of accident prevention until Washington has shown itself capable of "standing on its own" among the Nation's safe cities.

Today, District motorists and pedestrians will be given a first-hand example of the horrible results of carelessness on the highway. The Washington Post and Junior Board of Commerce, joint sponsors of a permanent safety program, will place a wrecked car at the foot of the new safety billboard on Pennsylvania avenue.

This car, its side and roof splintered and smashed, figured in a recent traffic mishap. Its passengers were crippled and maimed. Every District driver is urged to study the consequences of this one crash—and perhaps wonder what would have happened to him or members of his family if they had been passengers.

At the same time yesterday the American Automobile Association announced plans for a Nation-wide crusade against hazards at unprotected railroad crossings.

The motor club appealed to railroad executives, State highway commissioners and highway engineers for immediate steps to safeguard dangerous crossings. Motorists also were urged to report sites where hazards are particularly great.

Four Hurst YYesterday

Radio appeals for protection of Washington's 93,000 youngsters returning to school Monday were also made last night. Speakers, describing child safety efforts as of "greatest immediate importance," included William V. DeRosa, captain of the first patrol school boy patrol; Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, and R. W. Eaves, chairman of the traffic safety committee, District Public Schools.

In Washington traffic yesterday, a young woman and her escort were run down while crossing the street at Eleventh and Irving streets northwest. Helen Kerr, 18, of 3018 Georgia avenue northwest, suffered a possible fractured skull and lacerations. Her escort, Rod Bruce, 26, of Glen Echo, Md., received minor hurts. Both were treated at Garfield Hospital.

Harry Kayian, 55, of 1732 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was injured seriously last night when he was knocked down in the 3000 block of Cathedral avenue by an automobile operated by Fred Dayum, 60, of 3014 Forty-fifth street northwest. At Georgetown Hospital, Kayian was said to have suffered a skull fracture.

She was taken to Providence Hospital. Miss Hitt was a passenger in the cab driven by Thomas Sykes, of 243 Eleventh street southeast.

Dancer Is Shot, Blonde Held in Md.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 16.—With three bullets in his back, James Farrell, 26, an actor and Marathon dancer, refused tonight to reveal how the shooting occurred.

"Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no lies," he told Sergt. Albert Kirwan while being prepared for an emergency operation.

Miss Margaret McCartney, 27, in whose apartment Farrell was found, was charged with assault and shooting with intent to kill. She was released on bond of $2,500. Her companion, Mrs. Dolores Brooderman, 25, who was in the apartment, was released on bond of $250 after being detained as a State's witness.

Miss McCartney, a tall blonde, gave no testimony at the preliminary hearing late today before Magistrate Harry Fine.

When Sergt. Kirwan asked how the shooting occurred, she replied, according to Kirwan, "Well, didn't he tell you he shot himself?"

In a critical condition, Farrell insisted that he shot himself. Police said that would have been impossible from the position of the bullets.

NEWS FROM THE VATERLAND.

As tourists trot down the gangplanks, new uncensored tidbits about the top Nazis, about the Vaterland, about the crisis pour in.

Frau Goebbels . . . fashions

Some Czechs would prefer the war now rather than later . . . Frontier defenses on both sides of Germany are now so strong that attackers would lose five men to one.

• • • •

Goebbels, the Gnome, is a great boulevardier, and has an incognito apartment in the Charlottenberg suburb which isn't so secret . . . Goering seizes furniture and paintings from museums to adorn his various palaces . . . for keeps . . . High Nazis distinguish little between Reich money and their own . . . Nazi leaders are grafting from all manner of victims, but Hitler remains incorruptible and immaculate.

• • • •

But Hitler cribbed Nietzsche's ideas in his book, "Mein Kampf," which pays him handsomely . . . Nietzsche's the fountain of Nazi anti-Christianity and anti-Semitism, with his superman, we're-better-than-anybody theories . . . Translator, popularizer, defender of Nietzsche is a Dr. Oscar Levy, a chosen person, who wrote the article on Nietzsche for the Britannica.

"—outcries from the women"

The greatest complainers in Nazi Germany are housewives, who raise the devil occasionally about scanty rations . . . You have to register at grocery stores and get on a list to buy rationed food; for example, 4 ounces of butter, lard or margarine a week. It's lean pickings for foreigners with apartments and kitchenettes. They have to eat in the de luxe "window dressing" restaurants for a square meal, or else forage.

• • • •

Observers now think the Nazis can back down more or less gracefully from any menacing gestures they make at the Czechs, because they control the press and radio so completely for home consumption . . . There have been two well-authenticated attempts on Hitler's life, but he still exposes himself with considerable courage . . . Frau Goebbels is one of Germany's most brilliant women, but has dropped her attempt to create pure German fashions.

• • • •

Some Americans think Hitler wouldn't let us remain out of a war, if we were supplying his enemies—"He'd declare us in within 90 days" . . . The impending birth of Marshal Goering's daughter was announced exactly nine months before she was born . . . A Nazi journalist is serving a life term for showing the Nazi "Orders to Newspapers" to a foreign journalist.

"—young Nazis grow skeptical"

German women are stiffening the backs of their menfolk, and their complaints about food cause brief "strikes." The workers say they have to go home to quiet the frau . . . But the Nazis are convinced that France will crack before Germany . . . Kosher diet kitchens recently maintained on some German liners have been abandoned.

• • • •

Young Nazified Germans tend to get a little cynical about the whole thing when they reach 18 or 20 . . . Not only in high schools and colleges, but even in the castles for the "elite," where Nazi leaders are trained. They get fed up on the heiling and mass pageants . . . So they're told that they can take this stuff with a grain of salt. That it is intended only for the masses.

• • • •

Germans still imitate French manners and fashions . . . One American said two urns containing the ashes of prisoners were received by families in his apartment house within ten days after the men were taken to concentration camps . . . Nazi leaders are aware that American surveys show pro-German feeling dropping from 8 per cent to 4 and that almost half of die Amerikaner feel they will be fighting Germany again.

New Drug Helps Insane, Clinic Told

Georgetown Institute Hears Metrazol Aids Dementia Praecox; Gastric Ulcers Called Ambition Symptom

Doctors attending the third annual extension course of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, were told yesterday that:

Convulsions induced by the heart stimulant, metrazol, are beneficial in the cure of depressing forms of dementia praecox, which accounts for half the insanity cases.

X-rays are beneficial in treatment of inflammatory diseases, including pneumonia, sinus infections and boils.

The "wonder" drug, sulfanilamide, because of its toxic effect, should be used only in treatment of diseases which have a high mortality rate.

Ulcers of the stomach are apparently the affliction of the ambitious, while ulsers of the colon are apparently caused when weaklings are confronted with responsibilities or emergencies.

Dr. Sigmond M. Lebenson, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, said that the convulsion treatment had been effective in curing 28 per cent of 3,000 cases of all types of dementia praecox at the hospital. Some doctors have claimed an efficiency of 90 per cent for the treatment, he said, but this claim has been made for selected cases treated immediately. Many types of cases in all stages have been treated at St. Elizabeths, he said.

Used Intravenously

The treatment consists of injecting small doses of the drug into veins of the patient. Within a few seconds he is seized with violent convulsions which last about a half minute. After the convulsion the patient slowly changes in complexion from a fiery red to a pale grey, "the most terrifying aspect" of the treatment. But within a few hours the patient is able to arise and go about his nomal activities.

Dr. Fred O. Coe, practicing at Georgetown Hospital, reported striking use of X-rays in treatment of inflammatory diseases, particularly in treatment of pneumonia. X-rays hasten the building of resistance to overthrow the disease.

One benefit of X-rays, he reported, is that they are suitable for treatment of all types of pneumonia, while a different type of costly serum must be used for each type of the disease.

A considerable number of sinus cases can be cured by light X-ray treatments, while a smaller percentage can be greatly improved, he said. Most striking effect of X-ray treatment on boils and carbuncles is that pain is eased usually within 8 hours and nearly always within 24.

Dr. Sanford M. Rosenthal, senior pharmacologist of the National Institute of Health, cautioned doctors in the use of the new drug sulfanilamide. This drug when first introduced from Germany more than a year ago was hailed as a wonder drug, and at first seemed to cure a great number of diseases without any harmful effects.

Subsequent research at the institute has determined that the drug has a toxic effect, Dr. Rosenthal said, which is not yet fully understood. The drug has proved most effective against streptococcus infections and meningitis, he said. These diseases, he explained, are so frequently fatal that use of sulfanilamide is justified. Dr. Rosenthal recommended passage of laws forbidding sale of the drug without a doctor's prescription.

Ulcers Due to Personality

Dr. Albert J. Sullivan, of Gallinger Hospital, said that ulcers of the colon are probably due to personality of the sufferer rather than the other way around. Ulcerative colitis appears to occur when a weakling is faced with an emergency, he said.

Family history of such a patient will likely reveal a series of nervous diseases, insanity, idleness and failure over several generations, he said. These are the people who are introverted, he said.

On the other hand, he said, 90 per cent of persons with ulcers of the stomach are the ambitious driving people who are leaders in their community. Sufferers of peptic ulcers are likely to be found among those standing high in their class, and among self-made millionaires. One great difference between such a patient and a victim of ulcerative colitis, is that the peptic ulcer patient will pay his bills, said Dr. Sullivan.

Washington Urged To Join World Prayer for Peace

A call to Washingtonians of all faiths to join in a peace prayer tomorrow to save Europe from the "awful scourge of war" now menacing it, was made yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, chairman of Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, an organization comprising all religious groups.

Special services are asked in all churches and synagogues here tomorrow. The call to prayer:

"In this hour when the peace of the world trembles in the balance, let us join our brethren of all faiths throughout the world as they kneel beside their respective shrines and soldiers' cenotaphs and throw in our prayers upon the side of peace, that Europe may be spared the awful scourge of war.

"In all our churches and synagogues tomorrow may we implore divine mercy upon a selfish and fearful world, and beseech our heavenly Father, 'who hath made of one blood all kingdoms and tongues and peoples for to dwell together upon the face of the earth,' to turn aside this threat of war and give us peace."

New Building For Receiving Home Urged

Superintendent Wants at Least 50 More Beds to Separate Children From Delinquents

Subject of Congressional discussion last year and center of a survey being conducted now, the District Receiving Home was championed yesterday by its superintendent, Grady Leonard, who recommended a new building with more adequate facilities.

Funds for the continuance of the Home had been deleted from the 1939 district budget, and it was ordered closed at the end of this year. Agitation by strong civic groups, however, forced officials to replace the item in the budget on the proviso that a survey be conducted on the entire child welfare situation in the district.

In his annual report to the Board of Public Welfare, Leonard requests and—points out the request has been made "many times before"—a new building of at least 50 beds for children.

Leonard says more beds will be necessary "if foster homes are not secured to take care of dependents." He further recommends securing more foster homes to take care of all dependent children so that they will be entirely separated from delinquents. In addition he asks for a full-time recreational worker and teacher to take care of the program at the home.

Closing of the home, which has been recommended by a group in Congress, will probably depend on the outcome of the survey now being conducted by Miss Dorothy Henry, nationally known social financed by the Childrens Bureau of the Department of Labor, is under the supervision of the Welfare Board.
worker.

The Receiving Home admitted 224 fewer children during the fiscal year 1938 than in 1937. Leonard said this is the first time there has not been an increase since the establishment of the institution in 1928. There were 3,061 admitted in 1938, against 3,285 in 1937, of which 2,402 were boys and 659 girls.

Mother Love Fights Silent Duel With Itself for Hungry Baby

Two women were introduced in Washington yesterday.

Evelyn Williams, 19, jobless and wretched, forced herself to smile when her 7-month-old baby cooed while she made up her mind whether or not to give up her child forever to the woman who sat opposite her.

The other woman, who had no child of her own, betokened wealth and culture. Without speaking, she waited for Evelyn Williams, of 28 Ninth street southeast, to balance mother love against the fact that she could not give Barbara May enough to eat.

Barbara May did not know that these women were deciding whether she would be a rich little girl or never know where her next meal was coming from. She chuckled and tried to stand up. And that was the only sound in the room.

The woman in furs played fair. She made no gesture and she spoke no word to influence Evelyn Williams. Except that she would pick up Barbara May and fondle her. Only that, while she waited in silence for Evelyn Williams to decide, Evelyn Williams stared back at her without expression, except that forced smile.

A woman in Alexandria recently wanted to give away her twins. The rich woman—who had no child of her own—tried to adopt them, but she applied too late. She lost no time, though, when Evelyn Williams appealed for a home for Barbara May.

Last night Evelyn Williams stroked the hair of her baby, whose father is unemployed. And she said:

"I can't go out and work, for there is no one to leave the baby with. I want Barbara to have the things I never could give her—pretty clothes and things. And, besides, I can't even feed her good. It is awfully hard, but I think I'll give her to this woman who can give my baby a good home."

Meet Force With Force, Police Urged

Public Order Committee of D. C. Board of Trade Praises Department as 'Orderly, Courteous'

Members of the public order committee of the Washington Board of Trade urged police to "meet force with force" when law violators resist arrest, otherwise "there will develop a general disrespect for the law and a general breakdown of the morale of the officers and members of the department."

This message was delivered yesterday to the District Commissioners in the form of a resolution adopted by the public order committee earlier this week.

John F. Hillyard, member of the committee, composed the resolution, which received unanimous approval.

Stating that the Police Department, "with an insufficient personnel" had done splendid work, the committee commended the entire force for its "interest and zeal in the prompt prosecution of criminals and ridding the city of vagrants."

Saying that the Police Dartment had been unjustly criticized, the committee exressed the belief that officers have enforced the law in an "orderly, dignified, courteous and fair manner." The "few exceptions to this general rule," the resolution declared, have been "promptly handled and investigated."

Purse-Snatcher Escapes

Mrs. Nellie Carrick, 5280 Southern avenue northeast, was robbed of $21 yesterday afternoon when a colored boy, about 17, snatched her pocketbook while she was walking on Sixty-first street near Clay street northeast. She told police the boy escaped through the woods.

Haste Urged On Grants to Curb Pollution

Virginia communities along the Potomac last night were urged to act quickly in seeking PWA funds for establishing plants to control river pollution. Deadline for PWA application is September 30, Dr. William B. Holton, of the American University science faculty, warned over 100 delegates to the Virginia State convention of the Izaak Walton League, an organization comprising sportsmen and conservationists, meeting at George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

"The Washington sewage-disposal plant," Dr. Holton said, "is presently giving a 60 per cent treatment to the Potomac pollution. It would be useless for the District system to try for 100 per cent removal without aid of other plants in communities along the river above and below the Capital."

Dr. Holton pointed out that if the communities acted quickly they could get 45 per cent in outright grants from PWA, with 55 per cent of the project's cost in loans to be paid back in 20 to 40 years.

"Now is the best opportunity for constructing pollution plants because of the Federal aid," he said. "Not only Virginia, but Maryland towns should take advantage of the excellent opportunity." He added that it was not enough for Virginia to act, but that cooperative steps must be taken in Washington and Maryland also.

M. C. Howard, U. S. supervisor at George Washington National Forest, discussed conservation work in national memorial parks and forests. The fight against illegal trafficking of black bass was outlined by Talbott Denmeade, of the law enforcement office, U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

Symphony Debt For Water Gate Concerts $4,000

A deficit of approximately $9,500 was incurred by the National Symphony Orchestra Association in the operation of its series of 12 "Sunset Symphony" concerts at the Potomac Water Gate, according to a statement made yesterday by the summer concerts committee of the association, which supervised the outdoor programs.

Nearly $5,500 of this amount is covered by over-subscriptions and special donations, thus reducing the net loss for the summer season to about $4,000, it was stated following a meeting of the committee to consider the auditor's report on the "Sunset Symphonies."

The committee, of which Harold A. Brooks is chairman, pointed out that a record-breaking rainy season had been partly responsible for the deficit.

"We sincerely hope that some way may be found to cover the balance of the deficit," the committee declared. "However, the value of these concerts cannot be estimated in dollars and cents."

All 3 of City's 'Iron Lungs' In Use to Combat Paralysis

The three infantile paralysis victims being kept alive in the three "iron lungs" in the District remained in critical condition yesterday but no new cases were reported to swell the total of sufferers from the disease now under treatment in local hospitals.

Officials said cases now under treatment did not constitute an epidemic but represented only the seasonal increase in the disease. They added, however, it was rare for all three of the city's artificial respirators to be in use at one time.

His chest muscles paralyzed so that he cannot breathe without artificial aid, Reginald Weisenfeld, 22, of 1561 Thirty-fifth street northwest, has been kept alive in the machine at Gallinger Hospital since Tuesday of last week. The other two respirators are in use at Children's Hospital, where they are aiding the recovery of Stanton DuBois, 3, of Bethesda, Md., and Jacqueline Grant, 10, of the 100 block of N street northwest. Both children were stricken this week.

D.C. Suffrage Group Seeks Roosevelt Aid

Association Plans to Submit Petition; All Officers Re-elected; Treasurer Reports $132 in the Bank

The 150 men and women at the first autumn meeting of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association, in the Times-Herald Building last night, unanimously adopted a resolution to petition President Roosevelt to go before Congress and urge suffrage for the District.

The resolution was introduced by the association's president, Wilbur S. Finch.

Former Representative Loring Black, of New York, predicted suffrage for Washingtonians within the year. He said he believed the suffrage issue might come before Congress at its forthcoming session.

"Most of the men on Capitol Hill do not want to be bothered by governing the District," said Black. "They have the affairs of a mighty Nation on their shoulders. Indifference in the past may largely be blamed on misunderstanding. There certainly is no doubt now that the people of the District want suffrage."

The association re-elected all its officers of the past year. These are Finch, president; Harry N. Stull, vice president; William A. Maio, second vice president; Arthur C. Smith, third vice president; William H. Mondell, fourth vice president; Marguerite L. Krenek, secretary; Lee H. Shugar, assistant secretary, and Clara Wright Smith, treasurer. Two new honorary vice presidents, Edward F. Colladay and Proctor L. Dougherty, were named.

The defeat of Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, was described by Finch as a gain for suffrage. The Maryland legislator opposed the vote for Washingtonians, Finch said.

He announced that the protest of the Rural Letter Carriers of America against impounding of their cars in the recent convention here, and their resolution urging suffrage for District residents, had brought from them numerous letters urging that Washingtonians be allowed to choose their own officials and be enfranchised.

The report of the treasurer showed that the association has $132.29 in the bank.

Lost in Uniform Quest, Girl, 8, Gets Police Escort

Her father's vivid description of the French sailors' uniforms yesterday inspired 8-year-old Louise Hawkins, of 448 New Jersey avenue southeast, to go window-shopping.

That was all right, except that Louise, absorbed in her quest, forgot her way back.

At 9 p. m., seven hours after her departure, she was found 12 blocks from home, an exhausted, confused little girl.

A kindly passerby brought her to a police station, and the only uniforms she got to see were those of police, who also escorted her home.

Patrol Wagoner Catches Purse-Snatching Suspect

Policeman W. W. Styles of the Third Precinct started out on one job last night—and performed two.

Riding down Rhode Island avenue in the patrol wagon, en route to the station with a prisoner, Style observed two boys chasing a third as the wagon turned to Connecticut avenue. Out hopped Styles, and he captured the fleeing youth. The pursuers accused the third of having snatched a woman's purse. The pocketbook, containing $5, was found under the boy's coat.

Later, at the station, Frances Norden, 1614 P street northwest, identified the suspect and the purse.

Gen. Cox Tells Driver and Pedestrian They Must Learn to Think of Other's Rights

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A dramatic appeal for continued efforts to protect life and property on Washington streets was sounded yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the Commissioners' traffic advisory committee.

Speaking at the first in a scheduled series of safety radio broadcasts, Gen. Cox called for equal cooperation among motorists and pedestrians, urging each group to share responsibilities in current accident prevention movements.

Death Takes a Ride

The program featured the choral speaking class at Western High School in a vivid warning against the consequences of highway recklessness. A choral playlet, "The Other Passenger," depicted death riding with a drunken driver.

Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local A. A. A. club, told of the Commissioners' efforts to reduce the citys casualty toll and pointed out that only one child has met death since the new committee was founded.

In stressing the necessity for complete co-operation between drivers and pedestrians, Gen. Cox condemned both sides for refusal to "pull together." He said:

"A bitter war may continue to be waged between drivers and pedestrians until we all become better educated to our responsibilities. The man afoot holds a smouldering grudge against the man behind the steering wheel largely because he knows that his brittle bones have no more chance against swift moving steel than an eggshell under a steamroller.

"Meanwhile, the driver keeps a grudge against the pedestrian because he presents such an unpredictable, erratic and helpless hazard to safe driving Both are treating themselves to the luxury of self-pity, because each has a definite, traceable part in creating the inexcusable number of fatalities and injuries on our streets."

He described as "witless" the actions of motorists who "rocket down our roadways at unreasonable speeds' 'and pedestrians who "stupidly step out into moving streams of traffic from behind parked cars or against red lights."

Pedestrian Not Blameless

"Apparently the foot traveler," continued Gen. Cox, "does not realize that in the automobile age he must obey traffic rules just as strictly as the motorist is required to do. If he does not, he is not only exposing himself to destruction, but he is placing the motorist in the unhappy position of creating an unwanted—and probably unavoidable—accident."

The traffic advisory committee, said Gen. Cox, will continue its program of accident prevention until Washington has shown itself capable of "standing on its own" among the Nation's safe cities.

Today, District motorists and pedestrians will be given a first-hand example of the horrible results of carelessness on the highway. The Washington Post and Junior Board of Commerce, joint sponsors of a permanent safety program, will place a wrecked car at the foot of the new safety billboard on Pennsylvania avenue.

This car, its side and roof splintered and smashed, figured in a recent traffic mishap. Its passengers were crippled and maimed. Every District driver is urged to study the consequences of this one crash—and perhaps wonder what would have happened to him or members of his family if they had been passengers.

At the same time yesterday the American Automobile Association announced plans for a Nation-wide crusade against hazards at unprotected railroad crossings.

The motor club appealed to railroad executives, State highway commissioners and highway engineers for immediate steps to safeguard dangerous crossings. Motorists also were urged to report sites where hazards are particularly great.

Four Hurst YYesterday

Radio appeals for protection of Washington's 93,000 youngsters returning to school Monday were also made last night. Speakers, describing child safety efforts as of "greatest immediate importance," included William V. DeRosa, captain of the first patrol school boy patrol; Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, and R. W. Eaves, chairman of the traffic safety committee, District Public Schools.

In Washington traffic yesterday, a young woman and her escort were run down while crossing the street at Eleventh and Irving streets northwest. Helen Kerr, 18, of 3018 Georgia avenue northwest, suffered a possible fractured skull and lacerations. Her escort, Rod Bruce, 26, of Glen Echo, Md., received minor hurts. Both were treated at Garfield Hospital.

Harry Kayian, 55, of 1732 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was injured seriously last night when he was knocked down in the 3000 block of Cathedral avenue by an automobile operated by Fred Dayum, 60, of 3014 Forty-fifth street northwest. At Georgetown Hospital, Kayian was said to have suffered a skull fracture.

In a crash between a taxicab and a street car at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, Marie Hitt, of 515 Seventh street southeast, suffered a leg fracture. She was taken to Providence Hospital. Miss Hitt was a passenger in the cab driven by Thomas Sykes, of 243 Eleventh street southeast.

Dancer Is Shot, Blonde Held in Md.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 16.—With three bullets in his back, James Farrell, 26, an actor and Marathon dancer, refused tonight to reveal how the shooting occurred.

"Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no lies," he told Sergt. Albert Kirwan while being prepared for an emergency operation.

Miss Margaret McCartney, 27, in whose apartment Farrell was found, was charged with assault and shooting with intent to kill. She was released on bond of $2,500. Her companion, Mrs. Dolores Brooderman, 25, who was in the apartment, was released on bond of $250 after being detained as a State's witness.

Miss McCartney, a tall blonde, gave no testimony at the preliminary hearing late today before Magistrate Harry Fine.

When Sergt. Kirwan asked how the shooting occurred, she replied, according to Kirwan, "Well, didn't he tell you he shot himself?"

In a critical condition, Farrell insisted that he shot himself. Police said that would have been impossible from the position of the bullets.

NEWS FROM THE VATERLAND.

As tourists trot down the gangplanks, new uncensored tidbits about the top Nazis, about the Vaterland, about the crisis pour in.

Frau Goebbels . . . fashions

Some Czechs would prefer the war now rather than later . . . Frontier defenses on both sides of Germany are now so strong that attackers would lose five men to one.

• • • •

Goebbels, the Gnome, is a great boulevardier, and has an incognito apartment in the Charlottenberg suburb which isn't so secret . . . Goering seizes furniture and paintings from museums to adorn his various palaces . . . for keeps . . . High Nazis distinguish little between Reich money and their own . . . Nazi leaders are grafting from all manner of victims, but Hitler remains incorruptible and immaculate.

• • • •

But Hitler cribbed Nietzche's ideas in his book, "Mein Kampf," which pays him handsomely . . . Nietzche's the fountain of Nazi anti-Christianity and anti-Semitism, with his superman, we're-better-than-anybody theories . . . Translator, popularizer, defender of Nietzche is a Dr. Oscar Levy, a chosen person, who wrote the article on Nietzche for the Britannica.

"—outcries from the women"

The greatest complainers in Nazi Germany are housewives, who raise the devil occasionally about scanty rations . . . You have to register at grocery stores and get on a list to buy rationed food; for example, 4 ounces of butter, lard or margarine a week. It's lean pickings for foreigners with apartments and kitchenettes. They have to eat in the de luxe "window dressing" restaurants for a square meal, or else forage.

• • • •

Observers now think the Nazis can back down more or less gracefully from any menacing gestures they make at the Czechs, because they control the press and radio so completely for home consumption . . . There have been two well-authenticated attempts on Hitler's life, but he still exposes himself with considerable courage . . . Frau Goebbels is one of Germany's most brilliant women, but has dropped her attempt to create pure German fashions.

• • • •

Some Americans think Hitler wouldn't let us remain out of a war, if we were supplying his enemies—"He'd declare us in within 90 days" . . . The impending birth of Marshal Goering's daughter was announced exactly nine months before she was born . . . A Nazi journalist is serving a life term for showing the Nazi "Orders to Newspapers" to a foreign journalist.

"—young Nazis grow skeptical"

German women are stiffening the backs of their menfolk, and their complaints about food cause brief "strikes." The workers say they have to go home to quiet the frau . . . But the Nazis are convinced that France will crack before Germany . . . Kosher diet kitchens recently maintained on some German liners have been abandoned.

• • • •

Young Nazified Germans tend to get a little cynical about the whole thing when they reach 18 or 20 . . . Not only in high schools and colleges, but even in the castles for the "elite," where Nazi leaders are trained. They get fed up on the heiling and mass pageants . . . So they're told that they can take this stuff with a grain of salt. That it is intended only for the masses.

• • • •

Germans still imitate French manners and fashions . . . One American said two urns containing the ashes of prisoners were received by families in his apartment house within ten days after the men were taken to concentration camps . . . Nazi leaders are aware that American surveys show pro-German feeling dropping from 8 per cent to 4 and that almost half of die Amerikaner feel they will be fighting Germany again.

A small group of relatives and friends last night joined with Mrs. S. M. Weaver, of 2101 New Hampshire avenue northwest, in celebrating her 91st birthday with a guest party at Dodge Hotel.

She is mother-in-law of A. T. Eagate, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

Georgetown Institute Hears Metrazol Aids Dementia Praecox; Gastric Ulcers Called Ambition Symptom

Doctors attending the third annual extension course of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, were told yesterday that:

Convulsions induced by the heart stimulant, metrazol, are beneficial in the cure of depressing forms of dementia praecox, which accounts for half the insanity cases.

X-rays are beneficial in treatment of inflammatory diseases, including pneumonia, sinus infections and boils.

The "wonder" drug, sulfanilamide, because of its toxic effect, should be used only in treatment of diseases which have a high mortality rate.

Ulcers of the stomach are apparently the affliction of the ambitious, while ulsers of the colon are apparently caused when weaklings are confronted with responsibilities or emergencies.

Dr. Sigmond M. Lebenson, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, said that the convulsion treatment had been effective in curing 28 per cent of 3,000 cases of all types of dementia praecox at the hospital. Some doctors have claimed an efficiency of 90 per cent for the treatment, he said, but this claim has been made for selected cases treated immediately. Many types of cases in all stages have been treated at St. Elizabeths, he said.

Used Intravenously

The treatment consists of injecting small doses of the drug into veins of the patient. Within a few seconds he is seized with violent convulsions which last about a half minute. After the convulsion the patient slowly changes in complexion from a fiery red to a pale grey, "the most terrifying aspect" of the treatment. But within a few hours the patient is able to arise and go about his nomal activities.

Dr. Fred O. Coe, practicing at Georgetown Hospital, reported striking use of X-rays in treatment of inflammatory diseases, particularly in treatment of pneumonia. X-rays hasten the building of resistance to overthrow the disease.

One benefit of X-rays, he reported, is that they are suitable for treatment of all types of pneumonia, while a different type of costly serum must be used for each type of the disease.

A considerable number of sinus cases can be cured by light X-ray treatments, while a smaller percentage can be greatly improved, he said. Most striking effect of X-ray treatment on boils and carbuncles is that pain is eased usually within 8 hours and nearly always within 24.

Dr. Sanford M. Rosenthal, senior pharmacologist of the National Institute of Health, cautioned doctors in the use of the new drug sulfanilamide. This drug when first introduced from Germany more than a year ago was hailed as a wonder drug, and at first seemed to cure a great number of diseases without any harmful effects.

Subsequent research at the institute has determined that the drug has a toxic effect, Dr. Rosenthal said, which is not yet fully understood. The drug has proved most effective against streptococcus infections and meningitis, he said. These diseases, he explained, are so frequently fatal that use of sulfanilamide is justified. Dr. Rosenthal recommended passage of laws forbidding sale of the drug without a doctor's prescription.

Ulcers Due to Personality

Dr. Albert J. Sullivan, of Gallinger Hospital, said that ulcers of the colon are probably due to personality of the sufferer rather than the other way around. Ulcerative colitis appears to occur when a weakling is faced with an emergency, he said.

Family history of such a patient will likely reveal a series of nervous diseases, insanity, idleness and failure over several generations, he said. These are the people who are introverted, he said.

On the other hand, he said, 90 per cent of persons with ulcers of the stomach are the ambitious driving people who are leaders in their community. Sufferers of peptic ulcers are likely to be found among those standing high in their class, and among self-made millionaires. One great difference between such a patient and a victim of ulcerative colitis, is that the peptic ulcer patient will pay his bills, said Dr. Sullivan.

Washington Urged To Join World Prayer for Peace

A call to Washingtonians of all faiths to join in a peace prayer tomorrow to save Europe from the "awful scourge of war" now menacing it, was made yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, chairman of Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, an organization comprising all religious groups.

Special services are asked in all churches and synagogues here tomorrow. The call to prayer:

"In this hour when the peace of the world trembles in the balance, let us join our brethren of all faiths throughout the world as they kneel beside their respective shrines and soldiers' cenotaphs and throw in our prayers upon the side of peace, that Europe may be spared the awful scourge of war.

"In all our churches and synagogues tomorrow may we implore divine mercy upon a selfish and fearful world, and beseech our heavenly Father, 'who hath made of one blood all kingdoms and tongues and peoples for to dwell together upon the face of the earth,' to turn aside this threat of war and give us peace."

New Building For Receiving Home Urged

Subject of Congressional discussion last year and center of a survey being conducted now, the District Receiving Home was championed yesterday by its superintendent, Grady Leonard, who recommended a new building with more adequate facilities.

Funds for the continuance of the Home had been deleted from the 1939 district budget and it was ordered closed at the end of this year. Agitation by strong civic groups, however, forced officials to replace the item in the budget on the proviso that a survey be conducted on the entire child welfare situation in the district.

In his annual report to the Board of Public Welfare, Leonard requests and—points out the request has been made "many times before"—a new building of at least 50 beds for children.

Leonard says more beds will be necessary "if foster homes are not secured to take care of dependents." He further recommends securing more foster homes to take care of all dependent children so that they will be entirely separated from delinquents. In addition he asks for a full-time recreational worker and teacher to take care of the program at the home.

Closing of the home, which has been recommended by a group in Congress, will probably depend on the outcome of the survey now being conducted by Miss Dorothy Henry, nationally known social financed by the Childrens Bureau of the Department of Labor, is under the supervision of the Welfare Board.

The Receiving Home admitted 224 fewer children during the fiscal year 1938 than in 1937. Leonard said this is the first time there has not been an increase since the establishment of the institution in 1928. There were 3,061 admitted in 1938, against 3,285 in 1937, of which 2,402 were boys and 659 girls.

Mother Love Fights Silent Duel With Itself for Hungry Baby

Two women were introduced in Washington yesterday.

Evelyn Williams, 19, jobless and wretched, forced herself to smile when her 7-month-old baby cooed while she made up her mind whether or not to give up her child forever to the woman who sat opposite her.

The other woman, who had no child of her own, betokened wealth and culture. Without speaking, she waited for Evelyn Williams, of 28 Ninth street southeast, to balance mother love against the fact that she could not give Barbara May enough to eat.

Barbara May did not know that these women were deciding whether she would be a rich little girl or never know where her next meal was coming from. She chuckled and tried to stand up. And that was the only sound in the room.

The woman in furs played fair. She made no gesture and she spoke no word to influence Evelyn Williams. Except that she would pick up Barbara May and fondle her. Only that, while she waited in silence for Evelyn Williams to decide. Evelyn Williams stared back at her without expression, except that forced smile.

A woman in Alexandria recently wanted to give away her twins. The rich woman—who had no child of her own—tried to adopt them, but she applied too late. She lost no time, though, when Evelyn Williams appealed for a home for Barbara May.

Last night Evelyn Williams stroked the hair of her baby, whose father is unemployed. And she said:

"I can't go out and work, for there is no one to leave the baby with. I want Barbara to have the things I never could give her—pretty clothes and things. And, besides, I can't even feed her good. It is awfully hard, but I think I'll give her to this woman who can give my baby a good home."

Meet Force With Force, Police Urged

Public Order Committee of D. C. Board of Trade Praises Department as 'Orderly, Courteous'

Members of the public order committee of the Washington Board of Trade urged police to "meet force with force" when law violators resist arrest, otherwise "there will develop a general disrespect for the law and a general breakdown of the morale of the officers and members of the department."

This message was delivered yesterday to the District Commissioners in the form of a resolution adopted by the public order committee earlier this week.

John F. Hillyard, member of the committee, composed the resolution, which received unanimous approval.

Stating that the Police Department, "with an insufficient personnel" had done splendid work, the committee commended the entire force for its "interest and zeal in the prompt prosecution of criminals and ridding the city of vagrants."

Saying that the Police Deartment had been unjustly criticized, the committee exressed the belief that officers have enforced the law in an "orderly, dignified, courteous and fair manner." The "few exceptions to this general rule," the resolution declared, have been "promptly handled and investigated."

Haste Urged On Grants to Curb Pollution

Virginia communities along the Potomac last night were urged to act quickly in seeking PWA funds for establishing plants to control river pollution. Deadline for PWA application is September 30, Dr. William B. Holton, of the American University science faculty, warned over 100 delegates to the Virginia State convention of the Izaak Walton League, an organization comprising sportsmen and conservationists, meeting at George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

"The Washington sewage-disposal plant," Dr. Holton said, "is presently giving a 60 per cent treatment to the Potomac pollution. It would be useless for the District system to try for 100 per cent removal without aid of other plants in communities along the river above and below the Capital."

Dr. Holton pointed out that if the communities acted quickly they could get 45 per cent in outright grants from PWA, with 55 per cent of the project's cost in loans to be paid back in 20 to 40 years.

"Now is the best opportunity for constructing pollution plants because of the Federal aid," he said. "Not only Virginia, but Maryland towns should take advantage of the excellent opportunity." He added that it was not enough for Virginia to act, but that cooperative steps must be taken in Washington and Maryland also.

M. C. Howard, U. S. supervisor at George Washington National Forest, discussed conservation work in national memorial parks and forests. The fight against illegal trafficking of black bass was outlined by Talbott Denmeade, of the law enforcement office, U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

Symphony Debt For Water Gate Concerts $4,000

A deficit of approximately $9,500 was incurred by the National Symphony Orchestra Association in the operation of its series of 12 "Sunset Symphony" concerts at the Potomac Water Gate, according to a statement made yesterday by the summer concerts committee of the association, which supervised the outdoor programs.

Nearly $5,500 of this amount is covered by over-subscriptions and special donations, thus reducing the net loss for the summer season to about $4,000, it was stated following a meeting of the committee to consider the auditor's report on the "Sunset Symphonies."

The committee, of which Harold A. Brooks is chairman, pointed out that a record-breaking rainy season had been partly responsible for the deficit.

"We sincerely hope that some way may be found to cover the balance of the deficit," the committee declared. "However, the value of these concerts cannot be estimated in dollars and cents."

Other members of the summer concert committee included L. Corrin Strong, John Rowland Hill, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Milton W. King, L. E. Rubel, Charles W. Eliot 2d, Frank R. Jelleff and C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony.

Beginning today, the Public Library at Eighth and K streets northwest will remain open until 9 p.m. on Saturdays, Miss Clara W. Herbert, acting librarian, announced yesterday.

Tomorrow and succeeding Sundays the central building of the library will be open, for reference only, from 2 to 6 p.m.

All 3 of City's 'Iron Lungs' In Use to Combat Paralysis

The three infantile paralysis victims being kept alive in the three "iron lungs" in the District remained in critical condition yesterday but no new cases were reported to swell the total of sufferers from the disease now under treatment in local hospitals.

Officials said cases now under treatment did not constitute an epidemic but represented only the seasonal increase in the disease. They added, however, it was rare for all three of the city's artificial respirators to be in use at one time.

His chest muscles paralyzed so that he cannot breathe without artificial aid, Reginald Weisenfeld, 22, of 1561 Thirty-fifth street northwest, has been kept alive in the machine at Gallinger Hospital since Tuesday of last week. The other two respirators are in use at Children's Hospital, where they are aiding the recovery of Stanton DuBois, 3, of Bethesda, Md., and Jacqueline Grant, 10, of the 100 block of N street northwest. Both children were stricken this week.

D.C. Suffrage Group Seeks Roosevelt Aid

Association Plans to Submit Petition; All Officers Re-elected; Treasurer Reports $132 in the Bank

The 150 men and women at the first autumn meeting of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association, in the Times-Herald Building last night, unanimously adopted a resolution to petition President Roosevelt to go before Congress and urge suffrage for the District.

The resolution was introduced by the association's president, Wilbur S. Finch.

Former Representative Loring Black, of New York, predicted suffrage for Washingtonians within the year. He said he believed the suffrage issue might come before Congress at its forthcoming session.

"Most of the men on Capitol Hill do not want to be bothered by governing the District," said Black. "They have the affairs of a mighty Nation on their shoulders. Indifference in the past may largely be blamed on misunderstanding. There certainly is no doubt now that the people of the District want suffrage."

The association re-elected all its officers of the past year. These are Finch, president; Harry N. Stull, vice president; William A. Maio, second vice president; Arthur C. Smith, third vice president; William H. Mondell, fourth vice president; Marguerite L. Krenek, secretary; Lee H. Shugar, assistant secretary, and Clara Wright Smith, treasurer. Two new honorary vice presidents, Edward F. Colladay and Proctor L. Dougherty, were named.

The defeat of Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, was described by Finch as a gain for suffrage. The Maryland legislator opposed the vote for Washingtonians, Finch said.

He announced that the protest of the Rural Letter Carriers of America against impounding of their cars in the recent convention here, and their resolution urging suffrage for District residents, had brought from them numerous letters urging that Washingtonians be allowed to choose their own officials and be enfranchised.

The report of the treasurer showed that the association has $132.29 in the bank.

Lost in Uniform Quest, Girl, 8, Gets Police Escort

Her father's vivid description of the French sailors' uniforms yesterday inspired 8-year-old Louise Hawkins, of 448 New Jersey avenue southeast, to go window-shopping.

That was all right, except that Louise, absorbed in her quest, forgot her way back.

At 9 p. m., seven hours after her departure, she was found 12 blocks from home, an exhausted, confused little girl.

A kindly passerby brought her to a police station, and the only uniforms she got to see were those of police, who also escorted her home.

Patrol Wagoner Catches Purse-Snatching Suspect

Policeman W. W. Styles of the Third Precinct started out on one job last night—and performed two.

Riding down Rhode Island avenue in the patrol wagon, en route to the station with a prisoner, Style observed two boys chasing a third as the wagon turned to Connecticut avenue. Out hopped Styles, and he captured the fleeing youth. The pursuers accused the third of having snatched a woman's purse. The pocketbook, containing $5, was found under the boy's coat.

I believe, it was Westbrook Pegler who wrote the one about picking a horse to win the Kentucky Derby . . . the pick ran last . . . the writer said he waited around the rest of the afternoon for the horse to come in . . . it became dark and still he waited . . . finally, in desperation, he took a lantern and started around the track the wrong way to meet him . . . at the stretch turn he heard some movement off in the darkness . . . he cupped his hands and yelled, "Is that Brevity with Jockey R. In answer to inquiry: Sun Beau won $376,744 during his racing career . . . went to the post 74 times, won 33, second 12 and third 10 . . . despite that record, he was beaten twice one fall at Laurel after being played virtually off the board . . . the crowd used to chant, "Here we go, on old Sun Beau" . . . Jerry Gross remembers it well . . . according to one authority three birds, the Merganser, Swift and Duck Hawk, can fly at 200 miles per hour . . . yet the sparrow can do only 17 M. P. Nats Are Idle; It's Too Cold!

St. Louis, Sept. 16.—The game between Washington and St. Louis scheduled here today was postponed because of cold weather.

A double-header will be played here tomorrow. The two games will mark the final appearance of the season for the Nats in St. Louis.

Bucs Split 2 Games With Bees, Lead by 3; Phillies, Reds Divide

Pirates Hold Slim Lead Over Idle Cubs in Hot National Race; Boston Wins, 5-4, Loses, 7 to 6; Mulcahy Yields 3 Hits, Phils Get Nightcap, 2-1; Drop Opener by 2-0 Count

The Pittsburgh Pirates, splitting a double-header with Boston, remained three games in front of the idle Chicago Cubs in the National League race yesterday, although the nightcap defeat for the Bucs left the Cubs only three games down on the all-important losing side. Cincinnati, breaking even in Philadelphia, continued to trail the Cubs by a game and to lead the fourth-place Giants by half-a-game.

The Yankees whipped Detroit to climb within two wins of clinching the American League pennet. Cleveland, by losing to Boston, was eliminated from a final mathemathical chance at the flag. The Indians now are 17 games behind with only 15 to play.

Philadelphia, Sept. 16.—Three-hit pitching by Hugh Mulcahy held the pennant-chasing Cincinnati Reds to an even break with the last-place Phillies in a double header here today.

After Paul Derringer blanked the Phils, 2 to 0, in the opener to win his twentieth game of the season, Mulcahy turned in his great performance in the second game for a 2-to-1 victory and his tenth triumph of the campaign.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Pittsburgh's jittery Pirates, following the example of the other contenders, marked time in the drive for the National League pennant today by splitting a double-header with the Boston Bees.

Johnny Rizzo's 26th homer of the season enabled the Pirates to win the opening game, 7-6, in 11 innings, but a three-run rally in the ninth earned the Bees the nightcap, 5-4.

The Pirates maintained their three-game lead over the second place Chicago Cubs, whose game with the fourth place Giants was postponed. The third-place Reds remained stationary by dividing a twin bill with the Phillies.

Rizzo hit the first ball pitched to him in the 11th by Deacon Danny MacFayden over the left field

Cup Regatta Opens On Potomac Today

Sailing Races Scheduled to Start at 1:30 P. M.; Entry List Large in All Classes; Smythe to Defend His Comet Title; Keen Competition Assured

By Jack Munhall.

Possibility that the short course, of one lap, will be used for the sailing races opening the President's Cup Regatta today on the Potomac River developed last night when the Weather Man cocked his astute meteorological eye and predicted gentle northerly winds for this afternoon.

Should the old fellow be correct, regatta officials said the deviation from the two-lap course would be necessary to insure that the races would finish under the time limits.

Meanwhile entries continued to pour into regatta headquarters at such a rate that Capital and Corinthian Yacht Clubs were overtaxed with skippers, trailers and their boats from ports that ranged from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Providence, Rhode Island.

With 110 of these entries already tabulated officials expected 175 of the white-winged craft to be on hand, guaranteeing the largest sailing fleet ever assembled on the Potomac and the largest regatta held this year, south of the Long Island Sound. Entry deadline is 10 o'clock this morning and by the time fully 175 bots should be in the fold.

Comet Class Larger

The comet class, the championship of which will be defended by D. Verner Smythe, a Washington skipper, now has between 26 and 30 entries, or several more than its record total of 25 last year.

Newcomers to this event yesterday included four outstanding skippers, two from the New York-New Jersey area and a pair from Maryland.

With the entry of Henry Roe, Flushing, Long Island; A. N. Grant, Perth Amboy, N. J.; Bob Welsh, Millersville, Md., and Jim Speer, Oxford, Md., the comet class was assured its classiest field in regatta annals.

Speer, in his Surprise II, is fresh from a great effort in the national championships, where he finished third in a field of 47, while Grant, Roe and Welsh all are among the East's best sailors.

Smythe and his trim Sassy Too, however, will be a slight favorite to retain his title.

Many Snipes Entered

The Handicap A class, for boats over 18 feet, will have an all-Washington list, it appeared late last night. It includes George Dankers' Sink Quick, Louis Seiser's Sea Gull and E. B. Lambert's sloop Spray.

Next to the comets, the snipe class will have the largest number of entries, regatta officials said. In addition to boats from Sea Cliff, N. Y., and East Orange, N. J., crack

Pat Abbott, Turnesa in Golf Finals

Turnesa Beats Kingsley, 4 and 3; Abbott, Movie Extra, Triumphs OverChampion, 5 and 4

By Henry Super.
United Press Sports Writer.

Oakmont, Pa., Sept. 16.—A couple of tough little guys who took it on the chin every time they stepped up to the tees but belted home haymakers once they got up around the greens slammed into the finals of the Forty-second National Amateur Golf Tournament today.

They were Pat Abbott, a 140-pound job from Altadena, Calif., and "Little Willie" Turnesa, a natural featherweight from Briar Cliff Monor, N. Y.

Early this morning, just as the sun was coming up over the western Pennsylvania hills that lurk behind tough old Oakmont course, they stepped out in front with stunning blows on the first green. And they kept driving them home from then on to stay out in front all the way.

Both Are Unknown

Abbott, the 1936 public links champion, licked Dick Chapman, the Greenwich, Conn., millionaire, 5 and 4. Turnesa, youngest of the many golfing Turnesas, walloped Ed Kingsley, Magna, Utah, 4 and 3.

Tomorrow, they go at each other's throats in a 36-hole match to decide on which head the crown Johnny Goodman relinquished yesterday shall rest for the next year. It will be a battle unprecedented in amateur history, for never before have such unknown golfers as these reached the championship round.

Both Abbott, a curly-haired, 25-year-old fellow, and Turnesa, 23, and a recent graduate of Holy Cross University, had trouble before they came through winners. Six down at the afternoon turn, Chapman, who had eliminated Goodman, rallied gamely and picked up three straight holes. Then Pat pulled himself together and broke Dick's heart with a par on the thirty-first and a sizzling birdie on the thirty-second.

Turnesa, never more than four up, had a two-hole lead rolling into the stretch and was brought to a mere one-up on the twenty-ninth. But Willie, with a burst of courage, won three of the next four holes to take the match.

There were times when it seemed their stout hearts must crack, for there is nothing more discouraging than to stand up there on the tee and watch your opponent belt 'em farther than you every time. And on this Oakmont course the traps are out there just waiting to play host to the short drivers.

Willie and Pat, a Hollywood bit player whose life ambition is to become a flicker star, found plenty of those traps. But their irons were white hot all the time and they came out bold for the pin whenever they got in them.

Irons Are Accurate

Of the two, Abbott was consistently behind off the tees and it was a lucky thing for him that Chapman, who takes a terrific poke with his driver, wasn't always down the middle. Turnesa occasionally was able to step up and match Kingsley, a squat bespactacled youth who has plenty of power.

Kingsley got off to a wild start and hit them all over the lot. When he recovered on the fourth hole, which he halved, he was 3 down and fighting an uphill battle which never was levelled. Chapman likewise lost his first three holes and the whole thing might well have ended right there.

On the morning 18, Abbott's putter was a magic wand, while Turnesa's approach irons were so accurate that he didn't have to worry much about whether his putter was in condition.

Turnesa was out in 38 and Kingsley 42. Willie was 3 up at the turn. He finished with a 37 for 75, while Kingsley had the same for 79 and was 3 down when they went in for lunch.

Kingsley had a par 37 for the first afternoon nine—the only par round of the day—while Turnesa took a 38 to be 2 up at the second turn.

Abbott put together 39-38 for 77 in the morning, rounded the turn 1 up and was three holes to the good at the half-way mark. Chapman, whose rabbit's foot on his bag brought him little luck, had a pair of 40s in the morning for an 80. Abbott rounded the afternoon turn as a biting wind whipped over the course in 38 against a 42 for Dick, who then was 6 down.

The end of the matches were as

Englishman Retains His Land Speed Mark With Run of 357.5 M.P.H.; Cobb Quits

By the Associated Press.

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 16.—Capt. George E. T. Eyston erased John Cobb's 24-hour-old land speed record today with a new mark of 357.5 miles per hour, whereupon Cobb announced their dizzy duel was ended.

But Eyston is not satisfied at driving an automobile nearly 6 miles a minute. He said he may try again next week, presumably in an effort to boost the clip above 360.

Two flashing runs by Eyston's "Thunderbolt" on the glaring salt course regained for him the speed crown Cobb wrested away yesterday with an average of 350.2.

On August 27, Eyston had raised his last year's record of 311.42 to 345.49 and there were indications that the two Englishmen might continue their hazardous contest as long as their cars, the weather and finances held out.

Mrs. Simmons Golf Victor

Mrs. V. P. Simmons won the Ladies' Day Handicap tournament yesterday at Congressional, scoring 101-19—82. Mrs. A. C. Paul was second with 109-28—83, while Mrs. J. O Rhyne and Mrs Houston Harper tied for low putts with 30 each.

Mrs. Simmons won a prize donated by Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional member.

The Manor Club championship gets under way today and tomorrow with an 18-hole qualifying round, to be followed by match play on week-ends. Harry Pitt, defending champion, will seek the title for the seventh time.

Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary of the District Golf Association, will accept entries for the annual city championship until Monday night at 6 o'clock, at the Congressional Country Club.

The championship, with Billy Shay defending, starts next Wednesday with a qualifying round, to be followed by match play Thursday and Friday. The course will be open for practice rounds Monday and Tuesday. Flights will be provided for all entrants.

Greenberg Hits 51st Homer to Pull Even With Babe Ruth's 1927 Record

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 16.—Hank Greenberg's fifty-first homer of the year, a blow that put him even with Babe Ruth's record 1927 pace, wasn't enough today and the Yankees whipped the Tigers, 6 to 4, to move within two games of clinching the American League pennant.

CROSETTI

The Yanks used the winning combination of home-run power and Lefty Gomez to chalk up the decision. Joe Gordon and Frankie Crosetti provided the walloping in a big second inning, their homers netting four runs. Staked to that lead, Gomez coasted in with his seventeenth victory of the year, although he was tagged for 11 hits.

Big Hank's round-trip clout came in the fourth inning, with the bags empty. The game was the Tigers' 138th of the year. Ruth hit his fifty-first in the Yanks' 138th contest in 1927, the year he set the all-time high of 60 for one season.

Mrs. Meckley Beaten in Big Upset

Mrs. Scott Wins Over Defending Champion by 2 and 1 Margin; Mrs. McNitt Defeats Mrs. Walper, 4 and 3

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. Jack Scott, Colorado State women's champion in 1931 and 1933, making a return to competitive golf after four years, will meet Mrs. Arnold McNitt, Congressional player, in the finals of The Washington Post's Match Play Tournament this morning over the Manor Country Club course.

Mrs. Scott pulled the biggest upset of the sixth annual event yesterday when she eliminated the two-time medalist and present Middle Atlantic champion, Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, by a 2 and 1 margin.

Mrs. McNitt made it a perfect day for the underdogs as she took advantage of eight handicap strokes to defeat Mrs. Leo Walper, last year's consolation winner, by a decisive 4 and 3 margin. Mrs. Scott and Mrs. McNitt will play over the 18-hole route at 10 a. m. today for a replica of The Post Trophy and a year's possession of the original cup.

Mrs. Harvey J. Cooper, of the host Manor Club, will oppose the Kenwood Club titleholder, Mrs. A. A. McEntee, in the consolation semifinals at 9:55. Mrs. Cooper won on the final hole over Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, while Mrs. McEntee went the full distance before she triumphed over Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam.

Mrs. McNitt Improves

The Scott-Meckley match was a battle between two close friends, who have been golfing together for years. Mrs. Meckley defeated Mrs. Scott for the finals of the Maryland State championship in 1935, and the following year she won again in the Middle Atlantic tourney. Mrs. Scott has played little golf since that occasion, and, in winning her semi-final encounter, she played for the fifth consecutive day for the first time in four years.

Mrs. Scott, now playing unattached, received four handicap strokes from Mrs. Meckley, used two to halve, one to win and wasted the other. Mrs. McNitt, slated to receive 11 from Mrs. Walper, due to the handicap difference—18 to 6—used eight, four to gain halves and as many for wins on other holes.

Mrs. McNitt, highest handicapped player ever to advance to the finals of the tournament in its six-year history, has been playing golf for only three years. Constant play and practice of late has improved her game to the point to where she is making a bid for one of the major tournaments on the schedule of the Women's District Golf Association.

She lost to Mrs. Meckley in the third round of the 1937 event, which was won by Marion Brown. This season she played a leading role in Congressional's victory in the second team championships of the D. C. W. G. A. interclub play.

Mrs. Meckley Wins Third

Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Meckley halved the first three holes in 5-4-4 figures, and the eventual winner gained a halve on the next with the aid of a handicap stroke. Mrs. Meckley's perfect par three on the fifth was the first hole won, but the match was squared on the next hole as Mrs. Meckley was trapped in three and lost to a well-played five.

Regulation par of 4-3 on the seventh and eighth holes were turned into wins for the Indian Spring star, but her advantage was reduced to one at the turn as Mrs. Scott used a stroke handicap on the long, dog-leg hole to win, after they actually halved it in sixes.

Mrs. Scott chipped close and downed the putt to win the tenth and square the match, and went one up on eleven with a regulation par three. Another one-putt green earned Mrs. Scott a halve on the twelfth but she lost her one-hole margin on the thirteenth when Mrs. Meckley rapped in a 20-foot putt for a four.

They halved 14 to remain even, and Mrs. Scott took advantage of her last handicap stroke on 15 to win the hole, chipping close for a putt after Mrs. Meckley took three from the edge. They halved the next hole in fives and it was over on the short seventeenth as the Indian Spring star's drive caught the rough, she was barely out in two and after getting on three-putted while Mrs. Scott was conceded a four, after placing her first putt close to the cup.

Mrs. McNitt won the first hole from Mrs. Walper with a par four and was never headed. She also won the third with a regulation par, halved the next, aided by a stroke, and lost the fifth to Mrs. Walper's three, when she approached over a trap within a foot of the pin.

Favor Mrs. McNitt

They halved through the ninth, and Mrs. McNitt's stroke allowance on the tenth won the hole, and she was 3 up. The eleventh was halved in 3s, the eventual finalist won the thirteenth with a stroke and closed the match 4 and 3 on the fifteenth green as they halved in 6 and the handicap card showed another stroke for the winner.

Mrs. McNitt will receive a ten-stroke handicap allowance, to be taken on the card, in today's title round. Due to the advantage, Mrs. McNitt, whose golf has been consistent and well below her handicap, will rule a slight favorite over Mrs. Scott. The latter has defeated Mrs. J. W. Cramer, Miss Bernice Baker, Mrs. Woodlief Thomas and Mrs. Meckley by a total of 13 up, while Mrs. McNitt numbered Mrs. and Miss Simons, mother and daughter; Mrs. Henry Goodman and Mrs. Walper among her victims, by a 14 up total.

The consolation battles were both decided on the three green yesterday. Mrs. Cooper won the first three holes against Mrs. Stokes, after halving the next lost five through seven

Sammy Baugh Says 'Open' Tactics of Pros Reason for Game's Increasing Popularity

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh,
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

Why do folks go to football games? I'll answer that one for you: Because they want to see touchdowns. And that's why professional football is gaining more converts every season. The pros give 'em action.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Take the four games in the National League last Sunday, for example. The scores were: 26 to 23, 27 to 14, 26 to 17 and 16 to 13. Those games were doubly attractive, because they were not only free-scoring, but close. The fans at each contest saw a fast-moving battle. There was an average of 40 points scored per game.

And why do the pros score more points than the college teams? That one is fairly simple, too. It's because the professionals, unlike the colleges, do not dare to play safe. You'll never see a pro team that has a lead in the early part of the game resort to a defensive battle after that. As I was saying, they don't dare.

They know that a one-touchdown lead isn't a safe lead. There's usually too much power on the other club. So the pros have to open up and try to lengthen that lead. And that makes for free-scoring games and action that the fans like.

I don't mean that there are no low-scoring games in the pro league. There are plenty, but they are not as frequent as you'll see in college football. For one thing, I think the pros are more versatile and can put on more pressure. And they can take advantage of more elastic rules than college football has.

The rule that permits the pros to pass from any point back of the scrimmage line—they are not restricted to a point five yards behind the line of scrimmage as the colleges are—makes for a more open attack. The pros have one play, in particular, that the colleges can't use. It's that fake rush into the line where the ball carrier can leap high and throw the ball as he hits the line. It's one of the toughest plays to check and the pros use it plenty.

But there's another reason why the pros produce more touchdowns than college clubs. It's because the pros do not have the same fear of defeat as the collegians. The college coaches are to blame for that difference.

If college coaches lose certain ball games, they are in great danger of losing their jobs. The alumni begin to howl and the college coach is on the spot. So their teams get orders to go out and get a touchdown and make it last. The fear of defeat sometimes is so great that they refuse to gamble on a second touchdown, unless their lead is lost.

In other games a coach can add to his reputation by holding the opposition to a respectable score if the enemy is a big favorite. Thus they go out to play a defensive game.

Well, in the pro league, coaches are forgiven if they lose certain ball games. Club owners know that an undefeated season is too much to expect. The competition is too tough. There isn't much of a turnover in pro league coaches. There are no howling alumni.

And another thing. The pro coach isn't satisfied to lose by a respectable score. A 7-0 licking is no more costly in the pro league standings than a 50-0 defeat. They count the same. So the pro coach is never out to play a defensive game. He wants plenty of points, in the hope he can outscore the other club.

I'm making no claims in this article that the pro teams are better than the college clubs, but the fact remains that they can go out and score more touchdowns against tougher opposition. And I do not think that is any reflection on the defense of the pro clubs. They can play a defensive game if they have to. Look what happened at Philadelphia last Sunday. The Redskins gained a 3-point lead in the third quarter, and in the final period they held a Philadelphia team which had scored 23 points in the first three quarters scoreless.

And now I'm going to brag a bit. Did you notice that last week I predicted the outcome of all four of Sunday's games correctly? Or must I remind you that I picked the Redskins to beat the Eagles, the Chicago Bears to beat the Chicago Cardinals, New York to beat Pittsburgh, and Green Bay to beat Cleveland? All of which happened.

Inasmuch as I'm batting 1.000 in the prediction league thus far, I can't resist the temptation to take another shot at it. Herewith I'm predicting the results of tomorrow's three league games:

Chicago Cardinals to beat Cleveland at Cleveland.

Chicago Bears to beat Green Bay at Green Bay.

Washington Redskins to beat Brooklyn at Washington.

Dodgers Due Today for Redskins Game

Down In Front

—By Richards Vidmer

Cauliflower Control

The other night Mr. Muggsy Taylor, of Philadelphia, lauched a campaign which he hopes will produce a heavyweight capable of beating Joe Louis and thereby wrest the control of the cauliflower industry from the grip of Michael Strauss Jacobs. And no one is chuckling any louder over the attempt than Uncle Mike.

VIDMER.

Mr. Muggsy Taylor of Philadelphia has rounded up practically all the heavyweights on the horizon in his search for someone to conquer the Brown Bomber but it would seem that he is searching in the wrong haystack, for the man who can beat Joe Louis hasn't yet appeared on the horizon, which is the chief cause for Uncle Mike's throaty chuckles.

Not that Uncle Mike has any hallucinations about Louis lasting forever. Some day, he admits, someone will come along who will take the Brown Bomber apart and spread the pieces around the ring. That day doesn't, however, seem imminent. Still, the time will come as it always does and always has when Louis no longer will stand supreme among the men of the ring. If nothing else, old age will bowl him over.

But Uncle Mike has no fears about "them bums" whom Muggsy Taylor has gathered together, or, for that matter, about any heavyweight who has made a public appearance up to this time. The man who eventually will dethrone Louis, unless he retires like Tunney and Jeffries because there are no more worlds to conquer, is more likely to be found on the farms, the docks, in the steel mills or coal mines, not among the current crop of campaigners.

Mr. Muggsy Taylor launched his series of eliminations by pitting John Henry Lewis, the light heavyweight champion, against Jimmy Adamick. And there was nothing unexpected in the fact that John Henry Lewis won. The only cause for a lifted eyebrow was that he won with such difficulty. In fact, John Henry was in such distress through the last couple of rounds that he practically eliminated himself, further substantiating the theory that the man who has a chance to beat Louis hasn't yet appeared in the best pugilistic circles.

Pugilistic Pool

When Gene Tunney voluntarily abdicated his heavyweight throne 10 years ago there were just such pretenders about as there are today. In fact, a group of directors of Madison Square Garden were discussing his probable sucessor and the views were so varied that they decided to make up a pool and each one would pick the man he thought would be the next heavyweight champion of the world.

The list included such names as Paulino Uzcudun, Knute Hanson, K. O. Christner, Jack Sharkey, Johnny Risko, Young Stribling and, of all people, Vittorio Campolo. No one mentioned a young fellowed named Max Schmeling. None had heard of him. Yet Schmeling was the next heavyweight champion.

And although a similiar list drawn up today would probably include such names as John Henry Lewis, Tony Galento, James J. Braddock, Max Baer, Bob Pastor and Tommy Farr, the chances would be that an unknown would bob up to take over the title if Louis were to retire. Certainly none of those fighters mentioned above is likely to take Joe's crown away from him by right of might, or by might of right either.

Most of them have been tested against Louis and found wanting. The wonder is that they are found wanting another chance. Certainly nothing they did the last time they faced the Brown Bomber caused anyone to suspect that the outcome might be reversed in a second meeting. Pastor and Farr did manage, one way and another, to get out without being knocked out, but Pastor later was hammered helpless by Nathan Mann, which was the tip-off on his potentialities, and Farr was beaten by everyone he faced, hardly making him appear as a menace to the throne.

Added Starters

Louis has fought neither John Henry Lewis nor Tony Galento, but the former's inability to put Adamick away eliminates him as a threat, and although Galento has a magnetic personality, a boisterous sense of humor, a strong right arm and a great capacity for food and drink, he is lacking certain qualities that go to make a champion.

Obviously, the eventual conqueror of Joe Louis isn't coming from the rank and file with which Mr. Muggsy Taylor of Philadelphia has surrounded himself. When Dempsey won the title from Jess Willard that hot and sultry afternoon in Toledo, Gene Tunney was merely a marine returned from the wars and no one thought of pointing to him as a possible successor to the Manassa mauler.

When Willard took the title from Jack Johnson in Havana, no one even had heard of Jack Dempsey. And anyone searching for the next champion hardly would have looked under a flat ear in the hopes of finding him.

And when Johnson knocked out Jeffries at Reno, his successor was nowhere in sight. Jess Willard hadn't even made his first appearance in the ring.

So it has been down through the history of the cauliflower industry, and Mr. Muggsy Taylor might do better to look elsewhere if he expects to find someone who will dethrone Joe Louis and bring him control of the heavyweight market.

Pro Teams Play Here Tomorrow

Ace Parker, Duke All-America Star, Will Head Invaders; D. C. Coach Picks Eleven to Start Battle

Brooklyn's uninitiated but ambitious entry in the National League football race, the Dodgers, will arrive here today in time for a couple of sprints around Grimth Stadium and a session of callsthenics designed to shake the kinks out of their legs for tomorrow's game with the Redskins.

One of the most unpredictable of the dark horses striving to unseat the champions, the Dodgers are bringing virtually a brand new squad for their opening game of the campaign. Of the 29 men on the roster, only 9 were with the team last year—and these were outstanding.

"Potsy Clark," recognized as one of the shrewdest coaches in the business, heads the Flatbush delegation and has taken the precaution to surround himself with the necessary talent to carry out his intricate battle plans. If there is any way of executing a play other than by orthodox methods, Clark will figure it out, and he naturally needs a better grade of players to make his stuff click.

Ace Parker Is Spark

He has a better grade this time, with Ace Parker, all-American quarterback at Duke, heading the list. Beattie Feathers, purchased from the Chicago Bears during the off-season; Ralph Kercheval, the longest punter in football; Joe Maniaci, formerly of Fordham, and Boyd Brumbaugh, 198-pound fullback recruit from Duquesne, are others the Redskins must stop tomorrow.

Tom Thorpe, veteran official, who will referee tomorrow's game, calls Brumbaugh the greatest football player he has seen in his time, and Thorpe has been around since the ark landed. The lad is a pile-driving back of the Nagurski type and can buck his way through a brick wall.

Kercheval is the chap who kicked a 51-yard placement against the Giants two years ago to give his team a 10-10 tie with that club. He is not only one of the longest kickers in the business, but one of the most accurate. Instead of punting, the Dodgers frequently try for field goals on fourth down, if within a rifle shot of the crossbars.

Dodgers' First Test

Inasmuch as this is Brooklyn's first test of the campaign, Coach Flaherty, of the Redskins, is anticipating an unusually tough game. The Washington strategist figures that all 20 of the new men will be playing a trifle over par in an effort to win regular positions, and on paper the Redskins figure to have a tough enough battle with the visitors traveling at their customary gait.

Flaherty last night indicated that he will start the same line that he used against Philadelphia last week, with Millnar and Malone at ends; Edwards and Barber, tackles; Olsen and Karcher, guards, and Carroll, center. The backfield probably will have Jay Turner at quarter; Krause and Pinckert, halfbacks, and Irwin or Karamatic, fullback.

Washington will be first on the field at the Stadium today, working out from 10 to 12 o'clock. Brooklyn will take over the field at 2 p. m. for an hour's work. The Dodgers will make the Willard their headquarters while in town.

Redskin officials last night announced that 15,000 general admission tickets will be placed on sale this morning at the park, and that plenty of reserved seats are left. Rumors of a sell out, they said, are untrue.

Bosox Edge Indians, 2-1

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 16.—Denny Galehouse and Willis Hudlin held the Boston Red Sox to four hits today, but the Sox marked up a 2-to-1 victory over the Indians and tightened their hold on second place in the American League.

Aided by gloomy weather, Galehouse was pitching one of his better games when a combination of a walk and two singles gave Boston the two runs needed.

Archie McKain gave the Indians seven hits, but kept them scattered where they didn't mean much.

Cleveland threatened in the ninth when Heath singled, and Pytlak bunted. Higgins accidentally kicked Pytlak's bunt to home plate, putting men on first and third with only one out. McKain, however, forced Keltner to pop up and took Hale's light tap himself.

Eagles Beat Pirates, 27-7

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—A tight defense proved the best offense tonight as the Philadelphia Eagles kept the famed Byron (Whizzer) White bottled up and defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 27 to 7, in a National League football game.

Two comparative unknowns, Dick Arnold, a 200-pound back from Texas U., and Dick Riffle, a slender speedster from Little Albright, both playing with the Eagles, stole the famed Coloradon's thunder.

Arnold scored three touchdowns in the first half to put the game on ice. White contributed to the Pirate's downfall when he fumbled a punt on his own 20 which Arnold scooped up and converted into a touchdown. In the second quarter Riffle heaved a 34-yard pass to Arnold over the goal line for the second score and a few minutes later the husky Texas back picked a Pirate pass out of the air and dashed 20 yards to his third touchdown.

A fast-charging Eagle line kept the Pittsburgh offense in its own territory throughout the first two periods.

Cards Beat Dodgers in Double Bill

Mize's Triple in 6th Puts Opener on Ice, 4-1; St. Louis Wins Nightcap, 8-4; Home Run Scores Three

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 16.—The St. Louis Cardinals saved sixth place in the National League today with a double-header sweep over the Dodgers, winning by 4 to 1 and 8 to 4.

Lefty Clyde Shoun allowed seven hits and fanned six to take the opener, although his mates collected only five hits off Luke Hamlin and Lee Rogers. Johnny Mize's triple with two aboard in a game-winning three-run rally in the sixth was the big show.

In the nightcap the Cards got to their old mate, Jim Winford, for three runs in the first frame and four more in the fourth to finish on top. Enos Slaughter clouted a three-run homer in the big fourth. Fiddler Bill McGee, who relieved Ray Harrell in the third, allowed just one run the rest of the way to take credit for the victory.

Lavengro Beats Sun Egret in Camera Decision at Havre de Grace

Pays $15.30 In Feature Of Opener

Masked General Is Third in Susquehanna 'Cap;' Jockey Shelhamer Fractures Shoulder in Last Race

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 16.—In a dog-eat-dog battle to the wire, a fitting finish for the first feature of the major tracks in Maryland this season, Norman W. Church's Lavengro outphotographed A. C. Compton's Sun Egret in the $2,500 added Susquehanna Handicap before 7,500 customers today.

With their riders pounding, the pair of 3-year-olds reached the wire, seemingly in a dead heat but the camera showed Lavengro the winner. Masked General, representing the Brandywine Stable, was third in the field of ten. Mower, Nedayr, Clingendaal and other sprint stars were "up the race track," as the horsemen say.

From the moment Starter Jim Milton rang the bell over in the 6-furlong chute, it was a two-horse race with the youngsters predominating. Sun Egret, with Jockey Al Shelhamer aboard, went to the front while Lavengro, handled by the cagey Johnny Gilbert, was nursed along just off the pacemaker.

Shelhamer saved Sun Egret for the stretch run but Gilbert also preserved some of Lavengro's speed. Sun Egret appeared to be the winner with 50 yards to go but Lavengro answered Gilbert's whip to gain gradually. The pair seemed to jump at the wire as one horse.

Lavengro paid $15.30 and was clocked in 1:12 1-5. By taking the $1,650 first money, the West Coast-owned gelding brought his winnings for the year to $11,675.

From a monetary angle, the high spot of the program was the sterling performance and pay-off on Patsey Begone in the second race. The mare, beaten in half-mile competition recently, picked today to awake and paid a scattered few backers a $117.80 mutuel. Patsey Begone was expertly handled by Apprentice George Witmer, the mite of a boy who led the riders at the Timonium meeting. Those who teamed the longshot with Phara Belle, $8.10 winner of the first race, started the daily double season in high gear, collecting $444.90 for the usual $2 investment.

Although his Sun Egret was forced into second money in the feature, A. C. Compton's colors were in front in two events. In addition to Phara Belle, Guy Bedwell, his trainer, also saddled Kermay, a $14.50 shot, in the sixth race.

Jockey A. Shelhamer suffered a fractured right shoulder when he was thrown from Dark Revue in the last race.

different as day is from night. Turnesa went to pieces and was 4 over par for the last six holes. But Kingsley, looking the wrong way when Lady Luck finally decided to smile at him, went sky high with 6 over.

Abbott went 2 over par for the first three holes of the last nine, while Chapman won three straight with a pair of pars and a birdie. Abbott fired a neat par on the thirty-first as Chapman drove into a trap. The crowd of 1,500 groaned as the ax swung nearer Chapman's neck.

It finally fell when Abbott banged out a 255-yard drive on the next hole. Chapman was 25 yards beyond him. Abbott rammed it 3 feet from the pin. Chapman's was 8 feet to the left. His putt stopped 2 inches to the right of the cup and he holed it out for a par 4. Abbott lined his putt up and dropped it in for the birdie and victory.

Ariel Toy Is Out Of $10,000 Handicap

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 16 (AP). Hugh W. Jackson's Ariel Toy was withdrawn from the Eastern Shore Handicap, $10,000 feature of the second-day card of the fall meeting here.

The race was the first important fall stake for 2-year-olds in the State. A field of 19 was named overnight for the event.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

This is getting to be the newiest little column.. As exclusively announced here, Dion Kerr, Washington trainer, has been signed as trainer and farm manager by Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Kerr will take charge of both her flat and steeplechase horses. He is well qualified for the job. He has been associated with racing since his youth and was prominent as a gentleman rider at one time. Kerr gained a portion of prominence by developing Aneroid, the fine son of The Porter. Kerr, it was, who bid successfully for this colt when he was sold by the Whitneys as a 2-year-old on advice of employes. Mrs. Whitney is now in Hollywood. It looks as if Apprentice George Witmer is going to be a tough young rider from now on. After winning the riding title at Timonium, he moved right over here and clicked with Patsey Begone—and at a $117 mutuel. I was told sometime ago that Witmer had the makings and needed only some confidence in his own ability. He is gaining that with leaps and bounds. One winner doesn't make him a champion but, naturally a featherweight, he stands a good chance of getting in the big-time class. Well, we broke the ice at the major tracks with Good Odds as our first winner and that $14.50 price was not only a big smile but he was soon tripping over his thoughts. He marched into the press box after the second race and asked one of the scribes how far it is to Baltimore from here. "By train or bus?" asked the scribe. "By walking," replied the Tiger. Clocker Mike likes Army and Navy while Sally Sidesaddle, ace gal handicapper, prefers Wild Count. Bill.

First race—Pause seems the best suited of this field of juveniles. Stable regards him highly and I'm going to string along. Ghost Flyer has worked well and may be ready to be prominent in this company. Sun Plume should not be far out of it.

Second race—Bounding Count makes his way against this brand of opposition and appears to have the edge. Playmore likes the route and promises to be a keen contender. Justa Flight may go to the front and has the speed to deserve a money position.

Third race—The Marathon distance here favors Panalong. With the right handling, this one may be ahead at the payoff station. Army and Navy favors this course and is said to be fit. Howard to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Time Signal, a fairly consistent sort in New York, was shipped here in excellent shape and seems ready to down this field. Goes coupled with Infidge. Rye Beach, a Millsdale sprinter, promises to be a factor. Happy Code has speed enough to be dangerous.

Fifth race—Maeline, another New York campaigner, gets the call in the bulky field of the $10,000 added Eastern Shore Handicap. Carries the top weight of the field but has the courage to down the opposition. Lovely Night is highly regarded and should be a threat. Beau James runs like a good colt and probably will make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Mr. Canron is the day's standout. He has too many speed guns for this field, I believe Conquer, of the Viau-Parr entry, has shown to advantage over this track before and should go well. Savage Beauty to account for the minor award.

Seventh race—Javamocha performed in good fashion in New England and runs for my dough here. Wild Count and Galloping to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—Mr. Canron.

Our Guest Selector

Our guest selector for today is Lou Gevinson, the little mit mill from Southwest. Lou took time off from his training for Monday night's battle with Norment Quarles at Griffith Stadium, to give us his selections for today at Havre de Grace. Lou throws a wicked glove and occasionally takes a flier at the bangtails. Under the management of Matt Twomey, once a star footballer for the Apache A. C., Gevinson learned to trade punches at the Boys Club and with the National Guard. He doesn't know a runout bit from a cooling-out blanket, but he co-operated willingly. Lou says this is his first offense, so please be kind.

GEVINSON

Here's his selections:

1—Sun Plume, Robespierre, Pause.

Wheat Rises With Sales For Export

Purchases for Europe During the Day Are Estimated at More Than 2,000,000 Bushels

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Big export takings from North America, with nervousness over the British Prime Minister's abrupt return from Germany, ran Chicago wheat prices up 1¾ cents today. Moderate late setbacks from top quotations however, reflected trade belief that peace hopes for Europe had not been abandoned.

Estimates were current that a total of more than 2,000,000 bushels of wheat from Canada and the United States was bought today to go to Europe. Of this amount, 1,250,000 bushels were credited to Canada and 750,000 in store at the Gulf of Mexico.

Brisk purchasing of wheat futures here accompanied the upward shoot of values, but profit-taking and increased commission house selling developed on the higher levels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1 cent up compared with yesterday's finish, September 65¼, December 65⅝@65¾; corn also ½ to 1 cent up, September 52⅛, December 51@51⅛; oats ¼ lower to an equal advance; rye showing ⅝@¾ gain, and provisions 2 cents to 20 cents bulge.

Export Call Lifts Copper

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Copper futures moved against the general trend in commodity forward contracts today as persistent buying, mostly through a single domestic commission house, lifted the metal for future delivery to new high levels for the year.

Encouraging active bidding were heavy buying at rising prices in export markets, recent large domestic purchases and recurring rumors of a possible further price boost in spot metal. (Refined copper was advanced ⅛ of a cent to 10¼ cents a pound Wednesday, the first price rise in several months.)

The demand, credited largely to New York and New England speculative interests, carried the March delivery to 9.55 cents and May to 9.50 by midday, when prices generally were .09 to .14 of a cent net higher. Forenoon sales totaled about 123 contracts, the equivalent of 6,888,000 pounds of copper.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP).—Slightly larger receipts than expected and one of the few reactions in the dressed pork trade of the past month unsettled the hog market today and resulted in lower prices. Livestock men said the wholesale meat trade was holding up fairly well, although choice wholesale pork loins lost ½ cent a pound following yesterday's steady to ½-cent higher market. Cattle got unchanged prices, but trade was slow. Most animals were common, medium and low good. Lambs showed some power to rally from the low point of the season.

The Market

Market Pauses to Evaluate Swift Developments in European Crisis; Prices Seek Lower Level as Optimism Diminishes

New York, Sept. 16.—Financial markets deserved a rest after their nerve jangling of early in the week and they took it today, the excuse for comparative composure being that Europe and the world is awaiting to see what will come of the Czechoslovakian crisis. With a further meeting between the British Prime Minister and Herr Hitler expected in the next few days, the street leans to the opinion that we may have quiet for a time unless there is some untoward incident between the Czechs and the Sudeten Germans.

Such an unfortunate development is far from being unlikely. It could be staged by either party without difficulty, but the world figuratively has its fingers crossed and in pinning its faith to the negotiations initiated by Mr. Chamberlain. The British cabinet meets tomorrow morning.

Disappointment of the over-optimistic because no final peace was negotiated in Thursday's meeting contributed to selling in stocks yesterday. The opening was lower and there was little rallying power displayed in later dealings. At no time was the selling of huge proportions, however, and only 671,680 shares changed hands on the big board. Losses among the leaders ran from 1 to 3 points, but the majority of stocks showed only fractional fluctuations and the loss in the composite average was 0.61 point.

A dispatch from London that Chamberlain brought back from his meeting with Hitler a proposal for a four-power conference between Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy was given a favorable interpretation in the street and contributed to a mild rally in the afternoon, but traders were not inclined to rush in.

The Government bond market again was soft, domestic and foreign bonds eased, sterling dropped again and there were moderate setback in most of the commodities, including cotton.

Motors Under Pressure

Trading in stocks featured the motors and their accessories, which were weak. General Motors, the day's most active stock, closed off 1¾, while Chrysler was down 2⅞; United States Rubber 1¼, Yellow Truck ¾ and Electric Auto-Lite 1⅝. Week-end news from the motor industry was not favorable. Due to the strike in the Briggs Manufacturing Co., resulting in the shutdown of the Plymouth assembly line, output for the week as estimated by Ward's, is placed at 16,100, against 17,485 last week and 30,150 a year ago. A gain had been anticipated, as seven manufacturers are listed as being in production on their 1939 models. The United Automobile Workers executive board voted to accept the modified version of the John L. Lewis peace plan, designed to end the union's internal strife.

Railroads also have their share of depressive news in their loading report, but as this covered the week containing Labor Day a large decline was expected. The total of 586,887 cars for the week ended last Saturday was down 79,151 cars or 12.2 per cent from the previous week. New York Central sold off ¾ and Southern Pacific 1⅛. Declines of less active carriers included Atchison, 1½; C. & O., 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ¾; and Union Pacific, 3¼.

A feature of the rail section was the independent strength displayed by Nickel Plate obligations. The greatest activity took place in the road's 6 per cent bonds of 1938, of which issue 85 per cent has been deposited under the proposed note extension plan, leaving only 15 per cent. These bond jumped 9⅜ points and other issues were up 2 and 3 points in sympathy while the common and preferred also were higher.

Big export takings of North American wheat helped bolster this market, futures running up as much as 1¾ cents in Chicago and closing with gains of ½ to 1 cent. Cotton was quiet and sold off 4 to 7 points.

Bonds Dull and Lower

With the exception of sharp increases in nickel plate obligations, listed bonds today were dull and soft. The market in general was afflicted again with war chills and small declines were the rule. Trading in all issues totaled only $4,-510,000.

Long term United States Treasury bonds settled a little lower, the indicative declines ranging from 1-32 to 8-32 point. There were some larger recessions, but they served merely to bring a few issues into line with previous recessions of the market as a whole. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also drifted downward. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds gave up small fractions.

Among speculative rails the general trend was lower, with the losses mostly confined to fractions. Borderline issues were weaker than others, and in some instances lowest levels of the year are approaching. Local tractions were firm, and communications issues motionless. Holding company bonds, convertibles and other special groups drifted quietly lower.

In the foregin section, Czech bonds dipped sharply on a few trades. French, Belgian and Italian issues were firmer, but the defaulted German group continued to sink. Australians and Canadians were weak, apparently in line with London tendencies. Latin-American default issues remained uncertain.

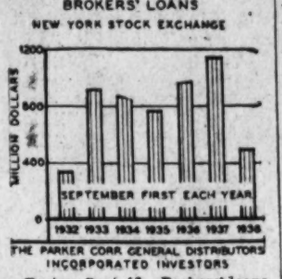
Brokers' Loans 50% Under Year Ago



Boston, Sept. 16.—Brokers' loans the first of September were less than half what they were a year ago and the lowest for any September 1 for many years, with the exception of 1932. Compared with the inflated days of 1929, loans today are only one-sixteenth what they were in September of that year.

Cotton Dips On War News

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—Cotton continued to move nervously today as renewed uncertainty developed over the European situation. December reacted from an opening high of 7.97 to 7.86 and closed at 7.87. Final quotations were 4 to 7 points net lower.

The market opened 3 points higher to 1 lower reflecting some irregularity of Liverpool. Trade buying supported the near months while there was hedge selling in the distant positions. Some Wall Street selling developed as the stock market eased and buyers held off as they took a less reassuring view of conditions in Europe. Hedge selling increased somewhat toward the close and local selling was more active.

A sharp falling off in exports of American cotton this week, which totaled 54,000 bales against 154,000 bales in the same week last year, attracted unfavorable comment.

Printers' Union Urges Labor Peace

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 16 (AP).—Delegates to the International Typographical Union convention today called for peace between warring factions of organized labor in a unanimously adopted resolution urging resumption of unity conferences between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Other resolutions adopted by the typographers indorsed President Roosevelt's efforts "to maintain peace by quarantining and opposing in every way the aggressor nations who would destroy democracy" and lauded "pro-labor legislation and policies" advocated by the President.

Talmadge Says He May Contest George Victory

Atlanta, Sept. 16. (AP).—Former Governor Eugene Talmadge, defeated by Walter F. George in unofficial returns for the Georgia Senatorial nomination, tonight announced he was investigating allegations of irregularities with a view of contesting the election if he finds them true.

Talmadge declared in an address that reports to his headquarters on election night put 124 counties with 220 county unit votes (206 are needed to elect) in his column.

Nomination in a Georgia primary is determined on the basis of unit votes assigned to the counties—each having from two to six votes. A candidate receiving a plurality in a county gets its total unit vote. The total State-wide popular votes does not count.

Jedrzejowska Defeated

Mrs. Fabyan Ousts Polish Tennis Star

Top Rated Foreign Ace Loses, 6–1, 6–4 in Big Upset in Forest Hills Championship Play on Slippery Court

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Sports Writer.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., daintiest little gal in big-time tennis, provided the National Singles Championships with another staggering upset today when she blasted Poland's brawny Mlle. Jadwiga Jedrzejowska out of the tournament.

Mrs. Fabyan, flitting about the rain-drenched court like a dark-haired doll, advanced to the semi-final round with a 6—1, 6—4 victory over sturdy Jadwiga, who is top-seeded among the foreign women and who was runner-up last year to Champion Anita Lizana, of Chile.

The bronzed Polish blonde, who is built like a college halfback, was a heavy favorite to trounce petite Sarah because of her powerful forehand and smashing service and because she had beaten Mrs. Fabyan in their previous meeting last year in the Maidstone final.

But the combination of Mrs. Fabyan's top-flight tennis and the wet, slippery grass in the West Side Club's stadium resulted in Jadwiga's defeat.

Mrs. Fabyan's victory advanced her to the lower-bracket semifinal along with Alice Marble, statuesque Los Angeles blonde, the Nation's top-ranking feminine star. They will battle tomorrow, and the winner will compete in Sunday's final for Senorita Lizana's undefended title. The other semifinal tomorrow brings together Nancye Wynne, of Australia, and Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., who advanced yesterday.

The women's round of four was completed when Miss Marble, 1936 champion, came from behind to eliminate pretty Kay Stammers, of England, 6—8, 6—3, 6—0.

Meanwhile in the men's division, sorrel-thatched Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., defending champion, and Sidney B. Wood, of New York, seeded fourth, advanced to the upper-bracket semifinal, completing the round of four. Budge will be a heavy favorite over Wood tomorrow and is expected to meet in Sunday's final the winner of tomorrow's match between John Bromwich, of Australia, and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles.

Budge advanced today with a 6—3, 6—1, 6—3 victory over Harry Hopman, veteran non-playing captain of Australia's Davis Cup Team. Hopman played excellent tennis but had no chance against Budge's pressing, sharp-shooting game.

Blond Sidney Wood eliminated Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., the southern "giant" killer who had eliminated Australia's mighty Adrian Quist in the previous round. Wood, at peak form, won with comparative ease, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2, over his bounding, scampering little opponent.

World Series Opens Oct. 5 In National League City

Officials of Four Frick Circuit Clubs and Representatives of Yankees Hold Meeting in New York; Ticket Prices, Starting Time Set; Eligible Men Listed

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—Opening game of the 1938 World Series will be played in the city of the National League champions, Wednesday, October 5, it was decided at a meeting today of officials of the four contending clubs in the senior circuit and the New York Yankees presided over by Commissioner K. M. Landis.

If Pittsburgh, Cincinnati or New York wins the National League pennant, the World Series schedule will be:

October 5 and 6—At city of National League champions.

October 7, 8 and 9—At Yankee Stadium, New York.

October 10 and 11—At city of National League champions.

If the Chicago Cubs win the National League pennant, there will be a day off for travel between the second and third games and between the fifth and sixth games. Accordingly, the third, fourth and fifth games will be played at Yankee Stadium October 8, 9 and 10. If the sixth and seventh games are necessary, they will be played at Chicago October 12 and 13.

All week-day games will start at 1:30 p. m., according to the time zone of the city wherein staged. The Sunday game in New York will start at 2 p. m.

Ticket prices will be the same as in former years, and will be sold only in blocks of threes. The scale of prices follow: Box seats, $6.60; reserved seats, $5.50; unreserved seats, $3.30; bleacher seats, $1.10 (on sale the day of each game only).

In the event of a tie in the National League race, the World Series will open on the third day after the tie is decided. President Ford Frick, of the National League, was vested with the power to determine how a tie should be played off, whether in one game or two out of three. Frick announced if a playoff was necessary it would start on Tuesday, October 4.

Yankee Stadium will seat 70,029 persons for the World Series with a gross take of $297,977.90. If the stadium is sold out, standing room will be provided for 5,000 persons at $3.30 a head. Thus each game at Yankee Stadium may gross more than $300,000. The record for a single World Series game is $240,-591 for one of the Yankee-Giant contests in the 1936 series. The record attendance of 66,669 also was established the same day.

32 Tennis Stars From Capital and Middle Atlantic Area to Vie in Annual Event

A select field of 32 tennis stars from Washington and the Middle Atlantic area begin play today in the annual Fall Invitation tournament sponsored by the Department of Playgrounds. All matches are scheduled at the Sixteenth street reservoir courts.

Barney Welsh, top-ranking Middle Atlantic player and a prohibitive favorite to win the fifth, heads the list of entries. The Rockville racquet has been seeded No. 1. Of the four seeded Hugh Lynch, No. 2, is conceded the best chance of stopping Welsh, although Price Colvin, Baltimore City champion, seeded third, is the dark horse of the field.

Colvin has yet to meet defeat in tournament competition this season, and is reported at the peak of his game. Bill Breese, fifth-ranking Middle Atlantic player, is seeded fourth, and Lieut. James Farrin, eighth ranking player and one of the foremost doubles players in this vicinity, is fifth. No others were seeded.

Mrs. McEntee used one handicap stroke in her victory. They were even at the halfway mark, played see-saw golf over the next eight holes and the Kenwood champion won the 18th, when Mrs. Godfrey missed a short putt, after being trapped with her second.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, President of the Women's District Golf Association, will present the prizes following today's final, in which the sixth champion will be crowned in the six years of the event. A point in Mrs. Scott's favor is that the previous winners hvae all been low handicap players.

entries have been received from Sparrows Point Yacht Club, near Baltimore.

Washington skippers anticipate a banner day, for local men predominate the fields in the canoe, Handicap A, Handicap B and 20-foot classes. Capital canoers, including James O'Meara's Banshee, John Oxley's Zero and Charles MacMullen's Black Streak, expect the stiffest opposition to come from James D. Caulk's Luther, jr., representing the Miles River Yacht Club on the Eastern Shore.

First division of the races will be sent off either the two-lap or one-lap course at 1:35 p. m., classes starting at 5-minute intervals until the last group is under way. The second and third heats are scheduled tomorrow.

Bears Are Beaten

Newark, N. J., Sept. 16 (AP).—The pennant-winning Newark Bears, who swept through the regular season with an 18-game lead, were handed their second straight setback by the third-place Rochester Red Wings, 2 to 1, tonight in their International League semifinal playoff series.

Eagles Draft New Policy

Restricted Grid Card Announced by Welch for 1939; Baseball to Be Major Policy

American University officials last night announced a drastic change in the school's athletic policy which will be introduced next year and, it is hoped, prove a boon to Eagle sports.

Sponsored by Gus Welch, head football coach and director of athletics, American's football schedule in 1939 will be restricted to six games with teams in the school's class. The opening game will not be played until the second Saturday in October, and the season will end the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Catholic University, American's initial opponent this season, will be dropped from the list and Hampden-Sydney scheduled in its stead. Practice will be limited to 14 hours a week, and will not begin until students have registered for class work. Spring practice is ruled out entirely.

Baseball will be restored to the program as a major sport, and emphasis will be placed on intra-mural sports in an effort to develop talent for major teams. A scarcity of material, evidenced by the presence of 16 candidates for the grid squad, is directly responsible for the movement.

Gene Wolfe, hailing from Denison College, Ohio, who has been appointed register of the University, also will serve in the capacity of director of publicity this year, officials announced.

Lombardi's homer off Max Butcher followed by Berger's triple and an outfield fly gave the Reds their two runs in the first game. Both games were played in the fast time of 1:28.

Gen. Thompson Succeeds to Post Of. Gen. Hartshorn

The War Department yesterday announced the appointment of Brig. Gen. Charles F. Thompson as executive for Reserve Affairs in the office of the Chief of Staff. He relieves Brig. Gen. Edwin S. Hartshorn, who will retire next month.

THOMPSON

It also was announced that Col. Robert L. Eichelberger, secretary of the War Department General Staff, will assume command of the 30th Infantry at the Presidio, San Francisco, in December.

Gen. Thompson, a native of North Dakota, participated in the Aisne-and Saint Mihiel offensives and in the occupation of the Toul defensive sector during the World War. He was on duty here from 1921 until 1924 as chief of the public relations branch of the War Department.

After graduation from the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1925 and the Army War College the following year, he returned to the War Department for a second tour of duty as chief of the public relations branch.

Col. Eichelberger, who has been secretary of the General Staff since 1935, was attached to the General Staff of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia in 1918 and participated in operations in the Sueben district in the summer of the following year. He holds the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal.

Upon his return to the United States in 1921 Col. Eichelberger was on duty with the Military Intelligence Division of the General Staff here for three years, serving as liaison officer with the Chinese delegation to the Limitation of Armaments Conference during its session.

5,000 Colored Doctors Aid A.M.A. Fight

Chicago Physician Says U. S. Tried to Enlist Race in Program for Group Health

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Representatives of 5,000 colored physicians in the United States today proposed alignment of their national medical association with the American Medical Association in fighting the $850,000,000 health program suggested by President Roosevelt's medical care committee.

In an address to members of the house of delegates of the American Medical Association, now meeting in special session to discuss the health program, Dr. Roscoe Giles, of Chicago, declared the support of the colored physicians had been sought by Government representatives for that program, but they preferred to align themselves with the physicians' group.

Officials Interfered

Together with Dr. Harold G. Roberts and Dr. C. H. Payne, also of Chicago, Dr. Giles declared Federal Government officials favoring the health program had urged the colored physicians at their national convention in Hampton, Va., last month to support the plan.

"The convention took no official action on the proposal," Dr. Giles said, "but instructions were given us to offer the co-operation of the National Medical Association to the American Medical Association. What we can do and will do will depend on action taken at this meeting."

All three colored physicians were invited to attend the meeting of the delegates and may participate in the discussions. Many colored physicians, it was pointed out, are members of both associations.

Committees were appointed today by Dr. H. H. Shoulders, of Nashville, Tenn., speaker of the physicians' house, to study the five points in the national health program, which is expected to be submitted to Congress at the next session opening in January.

Program Outlined

The program outlined proposals for expansion of public health service, increases in hospital facilities, medical care for those unable to pay for it, a general program of medical care, and compulsory sickness insurance for every citizen.

Meanwhile, Dr. Arthur H. Booth, chairman of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association, said the Department of Justice already has begun a preliminary investigation of the association's files. The Federal department announced last month it intended to investigate the medical organization on suspicion of monopolistic practices in medical care.

Prominent in Catholic charity work for many years, Mrs. Mary A. Johnson, a former buyer at Woodward & Lothrop's, in a will filed for probate in the District Court left a total of $80,000 to local charities and $10,000 in trust to her foster son, Joseph Risen Johnson.

The will directed that $8,000 be given each of the following: St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, St. Vincent Orphan Asylum, Little Sisters of the Poor and St. Ann's Orphanage. Georgetown University was given $1,000, Holy Farm Nursery $1,500; the Home for the Blind $500, and the Home for Aged Women $500. Other institutions received smaller gifts.

Mrs. Johnson named Norman Fischer and Carl Bergman as executors. Several bequests were provided for friends and near relatives. Mrs. Johnson, who died September 8, lived at 916 H street northwest.

The Thrill That Comes Oce in a Lifetime

HEY, THIS GUY I'M CARRYIN' FER, GOT A HUNDERD AN' TEN LAST WEEK. I BETCHA A QUARTER HE'LL BEAT YOUR GUY
EAVESDROPPERS SOMETIMES DO HEAR GOOD OF THEMSELVES

Bob Burns Says—

I read an article the other day tellin' about what a hard life the city newspaper reporter has'ta lead. The article said that the reason a city reporter is so unwelcome is because the reporter don't call on people unless they've done somethin' they don't like to get in print. I guess it's pretty much the same all over.

One time a cyclone hit Aunt Sophie Ledbetter's house and set it up on end and jest scrambled the furniture. When the reporter from the Press-Argus showed up with a camera and said h'd like 'ta take some pictures of the place, Aunt Sophie says, "It's jest like you reporters—to want'a take pictures of my house when it's so untidy."

Circus Sword-Swallower Finds Jail Here Easy to Take

He Asks for It After Two Days in Box Car With Door Locked and Dark Filled With Memories of Wife Who Left Him When the Show Folded Up

When Thomas W. McGee joined the circus ten years ago he looked forward to a life of adventure, but not the kind he ran into the last few days.

McGee can swallow a lot—in fact, at 20, he's a veteran sword-swallower—but he had to admit the adventure was too much when he arrived in Washington this week jobless, fundless, friendless.

Two days before, looking for a place to sleep, he crept into a freight car at Danville, Va. During his nap, the door was locked tight and for two days and nights McGee was a prisoner in the pitch blackness, without food or water.

Freed from this "voluntary" jail, but desperately weak and hungry, McGee walked up to Private W. B. Piper, of No. 3 Precinct, and asked to be locked up so he could get medical care. A piece of steel had lodged in one of his arms.

Yesterday Judge Hobart Newman sentenced McGee to 60 days in jail or $300 bond on a charge of vagrancy. Action followed investigation by the Police Court probation officer. Last night McGee was resting comfortably in another "voluntary" jail, and he'll get the necessary medical attention.

The youth's troubles began several months ago, when the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus folded for the season at Scranton, Pa., and left McGee stranded. Then, he told police, he and his wife separated. Aimlessly, the youth took to the road, finally arriving in Washington, where for 60 days he will find refuge in jail.
